Rededication Of Earl Hall Is Announced

Earl Hall — remembered by thousands of alumni as the religious center of their student days—has been renovated, and will be rededicated in a week-long observance beginning Thursday, February 24.

A re-opening ceremony, and open house for alumni, will be the highlights of the event. Special programs during the week, conducted by the religious counselors, will be another feature alumni are invited to attend, according to the Reverend John M. Krumm, chaplain of the University.

For the past several months—since the moving of the University Health Service to St. Luke's Hospital—Earl Hall has been undergoing extensive refurbishing. The main floor will have a suite of offices for each denominational group. Student meeting rooms are being established on the second floor, and a new stage floor, and curtain, are being installed in the auditorium. The Reverend J. Gordon Chamberlain is in charge of the renovation program.

The remodeling, reported Chaplain Krumm, has been made possible by a grant of $50,000 from the Jacob Schiff Foundation. Another gift of $7,000 from the Lutheran Student Foundation is being applied in part to the cost of remodeling.

Alumni at Deans' Day to Hear Top Faculty Speak

By J. ROBERT CHERNEFF '42

A rare insight into the American economy—past, present and future—will be provided by three internationally recognized experts at Deans' Day, Saturday, Feb. 12. Discussions on capitalism, business and labor are among the eleven seminars offered to graduates and their guests, with other top faculty members offering excursions into poetry, mountain climbing and revelations of current conditions in Australia, Asia and Japan.

Back to College

Alumni return to the scene of their student days. Here they descend the steps of Low Library after attending a session of last year's Deans' Day. A big alumni turnout (with wives) is predicted for this year's affair on February 12.

More than 500 College alumni will attend this annual return to Morningside Heights, renewing acquaintances with former teachers and classmates and taking part again in discussions of outstanding issues of the day. Most of them will bring their wives so that they, too, "may participate in the continuing discussions of what Columbia College stands for, and what it offers our sons," according to Robert S. Curtiss '27, chairman of the Deans' Day Committee.

As in past years, three classroom periods will be held, with alumni selecting the "class" they wish to attend. The luncheon session in John Jay Hall will feature an address on "A Liberal Educator" by Professor Gilbert Highet, whose radio series on "People, Places and Books" is now heard on fifty stations.

A special feature of this year's Deans' Day will be a commemorative tribute to the late Irwin Edman, whose philosophy courses and writings made him one of the best known, and best loved, of Columbia faculty men.

Four Seminars Offered

The first morning session will offer four seminars. Louis M. Hacker, Dean of the Faculty of General Studies and former College professor, will lead a discussion on "American Capitalism: Revisited." Dean Hacker, author of "The Triumph of American Capitalism," is a frequent contributor to national publications on this subject.

Meanwhile, Professor Morton H. Fried will discuss "Anthropology and the Current Situation in Asia," while Professor Henry F. Graff will conduct a session on "The American Presidency: Symbol and Symptom." Professor Fried, an anthropologist, has specialized in Asia; Professor Graff, an authority on the presidency, is a frequent contributor of articles on this subject to the New York Times Magazine and other publications.

Dr. William F. Russell, President Emeritus of Teachers College, and Deputy Director for Technical Services of U.S. Foreign Operations Administration will discuss "Working with the Point Four Program."

Two Columbia deans are included in the second morning sessions. Courtney C. Brown, recently appointed head of the Graduate School of Business, and former assistant to the chairman of Standard Oil of New Jersey, will talk on "The Understanding and Misunderstanding of Business." Harry J. Carman, dean emeritus of Columbia College, recently returned from a trip to the Far East, will offer "Some Observations on Japan."

Other offerings in the second morning session will be by Professor Marjorie H. Nicolson, former

College Fund to Open '55 Drive

The 4th Annual Columbia College Fund gets underway on February 16.

To mark the occasion, Frank S. Hogan '24, general chairman, has announced a meeting in the Columbia University Club, 4 West 43rd Street, New York City, of the 750 Fund committees who this year are being asked to achieve a goal of $275,000 from 6,000 contributors. All previous general chairmen of the College Fund are expected to attend. A buffet supper will be served.

Unofficially, the 4th College Fund is off to a promising start, with a total of $94,363 already received. Gifts from alumni are being credited to the appropriate class total.

The campaign ends June 30, 1955. Mr. Hogan explained that while the College Fund had previously conducted a nine-month campaign, it had for some time felt that a shorter, more intensive drive would prove to be "more effective, and, therefore, in the best interests of the alumni of the College."

Speakers at the general meeting will be Dr. Grayson Kirk, president of the University; Dr. Lawrence H. Chamberlain, dean of the College; and Mr. Hogan. They will be introduced by Arthur V. Smith '31, executive chairman of the 4th College Fund.

Dr. Chamberlain will greet the Fund committeemen on behalf of the faculty and staff of the College. Dr. Kirk will present special awards to the following committeemen of the 3rd Annual Columbia College Fund:

Benjamin J. Buttenwieser '19 for his leadership as general chairman of the 3rd College Fund.

Ronald F. Riblet, 1905 Class Chairman, for best class percentage of participation.

Theodore C. Garfiel, 1924 Class Chairman, for the largest class fund.

Bartlett Saunders, 1953 Class Chairman, for the greatest number of class gifts.

Shepard L. Alexander '21, Group Chairman 1921-25, for greatest number of gifts in his Class Group.

Howard Falberg, 1954 Class Chairman, special recognition for leadership in achieving a class participation figure of over sixty per cent while still on the campus.

In his address Mr. Hogan will emphasize support of alumni class sponsored scholarships. Currently, he will report, the Fund supports 124 students in the College on partial scholarships. Scholarship assistance has been called the "most urgent need of the College" by Dean Chamberlain, who said in a recent interview that "one out of every three students best qualified to attend a given college requires financial aid."

Mr. Hogan will explain, however, that alumni are free to designate their gifts for purposes other than scholarships. These gifts will also be recorded by the College Fund and credited to the appropriate class total.

Finally, Mr. Hogan will review the progress of the College Fund, and its potential for future growth. In the 3rd Fund twenty-two per cent of the alumni supported the Fund. Last year twenty per cent of the alumni contributed; the first year, eleven per cent. In these three years the Fund has tripled the number of contributors to Columbia College. It now realizes eight times the ten-year average of total gifts raised before the Fund's inception.

The record for participation in alumni giving has been set by Princeton, where, in 1954, 68 per cent of the alumni contributed to their annual fund drive. Yale leads in dollars for all Alumni Funds with a total in 1954 of more than one million dollars. However, the Yale Fund has been in existence since 1891, the Princeton Fund since 1940. Therefore, as Mr. Hogan will point out, a fair comparison cannot be drawn between these older, more established Alumni Funds and the College Fund.

Four Big Corporations Support the College

Four major corporations—Columbia Broadcasting System, Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, General Electric, and General Motors—have announced grants to higher education in 1955 which directly benefit Columbia College.

Lion Afield

By HOWARD LEVINE
Director, Sports Information

Right now Columbia is involved in another tight Ivy Basketball League race. This is virtually an annual concern for Light Blue adherents. For through the years Columbia has been one of the top teams in the 53-year old basketball loop.

At this writing the Lion chances for '55 look good. With Chet Forte showing the way virtually anything is possible. Little Mr. Forte is one of the most exciting, talented players to reach Morningside Heights in several seasons.

The most outstanding thing about this poised young scorer is his size, or rather lack of same. In a game which is usually dominated by players of mastodon proportions, it is refreshing to see a small man make good. Forte, at 5 feet 9 inches, is just that.

The Hackensack, N.J. sophomore, a phenomenal shooter and dribbler, averaged 24 points in his first twelve games. He has demonstrated a wide assortment of accurate shots, a great deal of court savvy and poise and coolness of a veteran. Lion fans are in for three full years of great basketball and the word "great" isn't used lightly.

Forte and his scrappy band of fast-breaking, exciting Lions are carrying on a strong basketball tradition on Morningside. Basketball is probably Columbia's most successful sport through the years. This success is revealed by Columbia's record in the Eastern Intercollegiate League, now formally known as the Ivy League.

Oddly, Columbia's titles seem to come in clusters of two. The Lions won in 1904 and 1905; in 1911 and 1912; in 1930 and 1931; and in 1947 and 1948. The other Columbia titles came in 1926, 1936 and 1951 along with the shared diadem in 1914.

Columbia has also produced some of the great names in the league history, too. There have been 29 all-star Ivy teams chosen by the coaches since 1926 and Columbia has had representation on all but ten. On several occasions there have been two, three and once four Lions honored. The four who made the team came in 1930 when a six-man team was named due to a tie for the forward berths. The Lions were Lou Bender, Sam Schoenfeld, George Gregory and Don Magurk. Two of that quartet made three all-Ivy teams. Gregory was named in 1929, 1930 and 1931. Bender made the grade in '30, '31 and '32.

Editorial in Times Lauds College Role

The following editorial appeared in The New York Times of October 31, 1954 on the occasion of the Charter Day ceremonies:

"Two hundred years ago today King George II gave the royal assent to a charter establishing a tiny college on a tract of land extending from Barclay Street to Murray Street and from what is now Church Street to the North River. There were ten trustees, eight students and a president. To commemorate the royal name the college was called Kings, and after the severance of ties with Britain it became Columbia College. For almost a century Columbia was an insignificant place. Although among its sons it could boast such as Alexander Hamilton, John Jay and Gouverneur Morris—to mention only the most illustrious—no one would have believed, in 1854, that Columbia College would one day become the heart of a great university.

"The trustees struggled manfully to keep the college one step beyond the encroaching city. As New York expanded from the tip of Manhattan Island, the college was moved north by successive stages. Today Columbia College is tucked away in a corner of the sprawling Colossus-on-the-Hudson. Amid the businesslike atmosphere of the professional and graduate schools of the university to which Columbia College gave its name and a good deal of its endowment and scholarly wealth, the college remains an intimate place. Always conscious of its tradition, Columbia College is a place for stimulation, for intellectual discipline and for independent thought. There is little ivy; but there are fine instructors and there is Dean Lawrence H. Chamberlain, a humane and talented man who draws boys to Columbia in the manner of his predecessors, Deans Van Amringe, Hawkes and Carman.

"The original charter forbade the college from excluding 'any person or any religious denomination whatever from equal liberty and advantage.' This week-end representatives from more than one hundred universities and learned institutions help celebrate a twentieth-century theme on that charter: that all men have an equal right to knowledge and its use."

The CBS executive is Louis Hausman '27, a vice president of the company. Mr. Hausman is one of sixteen executives in whose names the CBS Foundation Inc. has distributed unrestricted grants totalling $32,000 to fourteen colleges and universities.

The CBS plan was described by Dr. Frank Stanton, president of the company, as "demonstrating our belief in, and support of, the American system of privately endowed higher education."

The Standard Oil grant is part of a program involving contributions of $450,000. Eugene Holman, chairman of the company's board of directors, said that while Standard Oil long had made grants to educational institutions for purposes related to the company's business, it had for some time wanted to give financial support to general higher education.

The chairman of the board of directors of General Electric, Philip D. Reed, expressed the hope that "other companies may find in our plan an appropriate pattern for incorporation in the educational program in which they are interested."

Harlow H. Curtice, president of General Motors, said that his company will award four-year scholarships ranging from $800 to $2000. Details of the program have not yet been announced.

Scholars Are a Vigorous Group

Editors note: This is the first of three articles on scholarship students in Columbia sponsored by the College Fund. Subsequent articles will discuss the achievements of these students in the College and their plans for professional careers.

When Martin F. Gardiner was one year old his parents fled the Nazis in Austria. They lived in England for two years, and then came to America where eventually they settled in Newtonville, Massachusetts.

Today Martin's father teaches music in Boston, and Martin himself—who worked his way through high school waiting on tables—has a scholarship in Columbia College sponsored by the alumni class of 1904. When he graduates from the College in 1957, Martin plans to enter the field of scientific research.

During summer vacations, Martin works as a laboratory assistant in medical research centers. He also climbs mountains, and, two years ago, he ascended a 14,000-foot peak.

alumni and friends through contributions to the Columbia College Fund. It is not likely that many of these students climb mountains. Nor is it probable—fortunately so—that the terror of the Nazi regime touched their families so intimately. Actually the students vary greatly and yet, in another sense, they vary not at all. For example, all have excellent high school records, both academically, and in extra curricular activities. This, along with proven financial need, determined their selection for partial scholarship assistance in the College.

More than one-third of the students received special awards for academic achievements in high school. They range from honorable mentions in the Westinghouse Science Talent Search to Harvard Book Awards, from Robert Ross McKim Medals to American Legion Outstanding Senior Boy awards. Many have won English prizes, mathematics or science medals or citations awarded by their schools. Several are recipients of Bausch and Lomb chemistry-physics awards.

Representative of the group is Fred J. Graham '57 of Danville, Ind., whose scholarship in the

A Word of Thanks

By WAYNE VAN ORMAN '28
President of the Association of the Alumni of Columbia College

Response to our first issue of "Columbia College Today" has been most encouraging. We have received comments ranging from "Think it is excellent in purpose and in content" to "Fills a gap of long standing". A College faculty member liked it so much that he took 150 copies along with him on a student recruitment tour through the Far West.

We heard from an alumnus in London, class of 1911, who wrote that he found our publication "very nostalgic". We even heard from some men who always before had been "mail returns."

Naturally we are grateful for these kind comments, and can only hope that this—our second issue of "Columbia College Today"—meets with similar approval. Ours is a modest endeavor, intended as an effective medium of communication to bridge the gap between the College and the alumnus. We can ask no more of it than that.

If you have any pertinent news items about yourself or your classmates—awards, promotions, etc.—please send them along to us. We welcome your active interest.

Finally, I am privileged to extend belated Holiday greetings—and cordial wishes for the New Year—from Deans Chamberlain and McKnight, and from the officers of the College Alumni Association.

Earl Hall

The guest speaker at the re-opening ceremony in the Earl Hall auditorium on Thursday afternoon will be Dr. Frank P. Graham, U.N. Representative in India and Pakistan. Dr. Graham will talk on "Brotherhood on the Campus and in the World." Dr. Grayson Kirk, president of the University, will rededicate the building on behalf of the University. Presiding will be Chaplain Krumm, and the invocation will be delivered by Rabbi Isidor B. Hoffman, Counselor to Jewish Students. There will be a choral selection by the Choir of St. Paul's Chapel.

Chaplain Krumm noted that the re-opening ceremony takes place during Brotherhood Week, and added, "our own religious counseling program which set the pattern for similar programs in other universities, and which serves all faiths, reflects the spirit of Brotherhood Week."

Preceding the re-opening ceremony there will be an open house in the afternoon for alumni, faculty, students, University staff and other friends of Earl Hall.

The following day, Friday, February 25, Dr. John A. Krout, vice president and provost of the University, will address the University Council at a luncheon. The same afternoon Prof. Georges Florovsky, Eastern Orthodox Advisor, will conduct a religious program.

Rabbi Hoffman will conduct a program on February 28. The following afternoon, Tuesday, March 1, there will be a program under the direction of the Reverend John K. Daly, Counselor to Roman Catholic students.

A faculty luncheon is scheduled for Wednesday, March 2. Rounding out the week-long observance, there will be a program: on Thursday, March 3, conducted by the Reverend Walter E. Weist, Counselor to Protestant Students.

Full details of the rededication program may be obtained by writing or calling the Executive Secretary of Earl Hall.

Serving with Chaplain Krumm on the Earl Hall Committee is Dr. Lawrence H. Chamberlain, dean of the College; Richard Herspers '38, secretary of the University; and Vermont Hatch, trustee of the University.

Roar Lion Roar

Congratulations have been pouring in to Arthur Hays Sulzberger '13 from members of the Columbia community for the "magnificent" job he did as general chairman of the Columbia University Bicentennial Central Committee. They note that his inspiring leadership was a major factor in making the Bicentennial a memorable event throughout the world.

Among those victorious in last Fall's elections were the following College alumni: New York State Controller Arthur Levitt '21; Congressmen Frederic R. Coudert, Jr. '18 and Herbert Zelenko '26; in Wyoming, Joseph C. O'Mahoney '08 won a tight race for the Senate, winning back the seat he lost in 1952.

Formerly vice president of L. Bamberger & Company, Thomas V. Barber '25 has been promoted to senior vice-president and a director and a member of the executive committee of Macy's New York.

Louis Hausman '27 has been named to the corporate staff of Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc. as vice-president to work on special assignments. Mr. Hausman, who joined the company in 1940, was formerly vice-president of CBS-Columbia, radio-TV set-making division.

Set Roll Call Of All Class Presidents

A roll call of all Class Presidents will be a feature of Deans' Day on February 12, it was announced by Theodore C. Garfield '24, chairman of the executive committee of the newly formed Class Presidents Association.

This innovation, one of the many steps being taken by the Association to strengthen and revive class organizations from '95 to '54, was evolved at a recent meeting of the group. At the same session, five committees were formed to carry forward the work of the Association.

The committees and their chairmen are:

Committee to Reactivate Moribund Classes—James L. Anderson '24.

Committee to Investigate Mailing Facilities Available to Classes—Beril Edelman '24.

Committee on Finances—John F. Steeves '48.

Committee on Nominations—Arthur V. Smith '31.

Committee on Constitution and By-Laws—John S. Henry '30.

On behalf of the Committee to Reactivate Moribund Classes, Mr. Anderson submitted seven criteria for "judging the degree of organization in a class." They are:

1. Does it have a functioning board of officers?

2. Does it have a secretary who keeps an adequate and up-to-date mailing list?

3. Does it have a treasury ample to cover those needs of the class, such as postage, addressing and mailing of notices and letters, requisite to its ongoing life as a class?

4. Does it hold periodic annual class functions, notably an annual class dinner?

5. Does it have a newsletter?

6. Is there a sizeable representation of the class in the Columbia College Alumni Association?

7. Does it participate to the extent of at least 33 1/3 per cent of its membership in the Columbia College Fund?

On Mailing Facilities Available to Classes, Mr. Edelman reported that a student in the Industrial Engineering Department has been assigned to work with his group on this subject.

Following the tribute to Professor Edman, the afternoon session will provide a choice of topics ranging from unions to mountain climbing, from poetry to student health.

Professor Leo Wolman, an official of the National Bureau of Economic Research and former member of numerous governmental agencies, will conduct a seminar on "Unions and Wages." Professor David Allan Robertson, Jr., will talk on "The Mountains Remembered: Prose and Verse of Climbing."

Coykendall Family Will Receive Medal

Frederick Coykendall '95, who died suddenly on November 18 of last year, was to have been the ninth recipient of the Alexander Hamilton Medal. Mr. Coykendall was chairman of the Columbia University Trustees.

He was to have received the medal—the College's highest alumni award—as guest of honor at the 1955 Alexander Hamilton Dinner scheduled for March 24.

The College Alumni Association—which awards the medal each year "for distinguished service and accomplishment in any field of human endeavor"—has announced that the dinner will not be held. Instead the medal will be awarded posthumously to Mr. Coykendall, with presentation to his family at a ceremony this Spring in the Trustees room of Low Memorial Library.

"Mr. Coykendall's death is a great loss to Columbia," said Wayne Van Orman, president of the Association. "All of us had profound respect for his service to the University and to the entire educational community."

The name of Frederick Coykendall

dall will be added to a distinguished roster of recipients of the Alexander Hamilton Medal. Last year it was awarded to Frank S. Hogan, district attorney of New York County.

Other recipients of the medal are: the late Nicholas Murray Butler '82, Columbia's 12th president; Dr. Frank D. Fackenthal '06, former acting president of the University; V. K. Wellington Koo '09, Chinese Ambassador to the United States; Major General William J. Donovan '05, head of OSS during World War II; Dr. Harry J. Carman, dean emeritus of the College; Dr. Carlton J. H. Hayes '04, retired Seth Low Professor of History and former U. S. ambassador to Spain; and Arthur Hays Sulzberger '13, president and publisher of the New York Times.

"Teacher In America"

"Teacher in America," by Jacques Barzun. 1954. Doubleday Anchor Books. 280 pp. $85.

By BERND BRECHER '54

Jacques Barzun is a product of Columbia College, and the College has in turn become to a great degree his product. The Professor of History has studied and taught here all his life and what he says about the art of teaching and the nature of learning parallels the Columbia philosophy—most of the time.

This book was originally published ten years ago and what is in it has been reiterated a thousand times since. Barzun speaks for a liberal arts education on and off the campus. For thought as opposed to fact. For personal contact as opposed to mass production. For intellect as opposed to "hokum." For a life-long process of learning as opposed to a pat four-year education. He looks at what college teaching has become and is appalled by much of it.

But he sees a bright spot here and there. At Columbia, he sees an academic life that, though not perfect, offers hope for the future and for others to exemplify. The denial of the "half man" is the core of that hope. A democratic state depends on the calibre and number of its citizens, the author says, and his concept of that citizen is encouraging. Man is always growing, always learning—college does not educate him as such but prepares him for life. The engineering school is not enough, for knowledge begets facts, not vice-versa.

Barzun loves language and uses it accordingly. His sharp wit and sarcasm add weight to his opinions, which are as enlightening as they are entertaining. "Teacher in America" is not an historical study, but an informal discussion. In this lies its strength, but also its weakness. Thus, the author is often inaccurate—speaking of generalities and specifics without differentiation, defending indiscriminately the academic against the less or non-academic.

"Teacher In America"

Barzun is a master at turning a phrase well, even if a bit obviously. "The Ph.D. degree has become the union card of the American college teacher," is wonderful. On the debit side, "Teaching in America is a 24-hour job, 12 months in the year: sabbatical leaves are provided so you can have your coronary thrombosis off the campus," is, in context, too defensively self-indulgent.

But in its raison d'être, the re-examination of the position of higher education in America, this book is brilliant. Worry less, Barzun would say, about Russia turning out more engineers than we. But worry more about the tendency here to meet this threat by graduating more "robots" than citizens. America's strength lies in human beings; an automaton could never defend democracy.

Mr. Brecher, also '55J, is Secretary of his class and a member of the Executive Committee of the College Presidents' Association.

Two Major Forums Held On Campus

Two outstanding events—Dean's Day and the Forum on Democracy—brought a deluge of visitors to Columbia College on Morning-side.

On February 12, more than 400 alumni, many accompanied by wives and children, converged on the campus for the ninth annual Dean's Day co-sponsored by the College and the Alumni Association. It was the second largest Dean's Day crowd in the history of the event.

Alumni and guests heard distinguished authorities on the Columbia faculty discuss problems in such diverse fields as unions and wages, anthropology, and the current crisis in Asia. A highlight of the affair was a commemorative tribute to the late philosopher, Irwin Edman.

For three days beginning on February 25, the seventh annual Forum on Democracy held the spotlight. More than one hundred and fifty high school students, twenty-nine staff members from seventy-six secondary schools, and over seventy-five Columbia College students participated in panel discussions on the Forum theme "Science and Democracy."

In addition to four general sessions, there were informal receptions, luncheon and dinner meet-

Society Calls For Continued Aid to Classes

Strengthening of the alumni classes continues to be the main objective of the recently formed—and newly renamed—Society of Class Presidents.

The statement was made by Aaron W. Berg '24, who addressed his remarks to more than 100 class officers and guests who convened on March 21 in the Knickerbocker tap room of the Jacob Ruppert Brewing Company in New York City, where they later heard guest speaker Lawrence H. Chamberlain discuss the question of Columbia's future expansion.

Mr. Berg, vice president and chairman of the Standing Committee of the Alumni Association, was the first of several speakers to laud the role the Society can play in the future of the College. Others who stressed its significance were Robert S. Curtiss '27, president of his class, and Theodore C. Garfield '24, chairman of the Society's executive committee, who presided at the affair.

Mr. Berg defined the overall objectives of the Society more fully, stressing its functions of providing closer liaison between class and campus, and of assisting the graduating class in organizing. He cited, too, its purpose of stimulating an exchange of ideas between the classes, and also of reducing duplication of Columbia mailings.

Student Enrollment Upsurge Affects College Planning

In a realistic appraisal of the future of higher education, Dean Lawrence H. Chamberlain has declared that private as well as public institutions must share the responsibility for "the rising tide of students who will knock on our doors in the years ahead."

He estimated that by 1970 approximately 5,000,000 individuals will be enrolled in American colleges and universities, almost double the present figure. This prospect, he said, is based on the upward trend in the birth rate, and the correspondingly greater percentage of qualified applicants.

Addressing the Society of Class Presidents on March 21, the Dean warned that limited expansion of the College may be necessary to fulfill Columbia's own obligation.

He added, "Columbia has become great to the degree that it has been dynamic. This, of course, is in the American tradition of a dynamic society. There is no substitute for vitality. No institution can stop growing and still remain a vital force. Columbia must continue to rove in quality and—within the framework of its own character and facilities—in quantity."

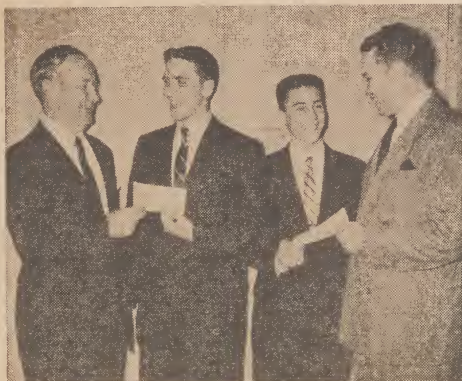

The Dean declared, however, that while the element of expansion must be present, it must be "a very careful and very selective process." He emphasized that Columbia can expand only to the extent that students admitted maintain the quality of the present student body, and to the extent that the College can adjust its faculty.

Specifically, the Dean suggested the possibility of an eventual ten to twenty per cent increase in the student body, although pointing out that this represented his personal opinion and that the final decision must come from the faculty.

The Dean noted that there are currently 2,200 students in the College. In 1946-47 there were 2,700 students, the maximum number the Dean now estimates for any program of expansion. He

Undergraduates Pitch In

Hogan Urges All Alumni To Support College Fund

The Fourth Annual Columbia College Fund has achieved 63 per cent of its $275,000 goal, according to General Chairman Frank S. Hogan '24 in a statement announcing the progress of the Fund at mid-campaign date.

Mr. Hogan reported that as of April 15, $171,884.28 had been received from 2,216 contributors. He noted, however, that the number of donors represented only 38 per cent of the 6,000 donor goal.

"The College's financial need poses a challenge to all alumni who have benefited from the high quality of a Columbia education," Mr. Hogan declared. "It should be of paramount concern to all of us who identify ourselves as Columbia men that the College maintain its quality of leadership."

Asks Help Of All

"Therefore," Mr. Hogan continued, "I urge every alumnus to contribute what he can to help solve at Columbia a problem that confronts almost every private institution in the country."

Mr. Hogan cited two encouraging signs in the current campaign: (1) the increasing number of new donors, and (2) the many alumni who are giving more money to the College this year than ever before. However, he added, there are still many alumni who have not repeated their gift of last year.

Mr. Hogan explained that gifts to the College Fund may be earmarked for one of three categories. First, an alumnus may designate his gift for scholarship aid. Currently the College sponsors 124 students in the College on partial scholarships. Or the alumnus can contribute for a specific purpose other than scholarships. Finally, he may designate his contribution as an unrestricted gift, allowing free use of the gift by the Dean of the College.

Corporate Gifts

Noting the estimated $100,000,000 that corporations will spend on support of higher education in 1955, Mr. Hogan stated that Columbia "indeed welcomes industry's greater recognition of both the financial burden imposed on liberal arts colleges, and of the stake industry has in the future welfare of higher education." He pointed out, however, that with half of the colleges and universities in the country operating at a deficit, no one institution at this time can realize enough corporate support to solve its financial difficulties.

Corporations themselves, he noted, encourage diversified support; many of them—such as the General Electric Company, for example—tie in directly with alumni giving by matching gifts by their employees.

He stated that many Columbia alumni are in a position to encourage corporate or foundation grants to the College, and urged them to do so.

Dean's Address

observed that the larger student body in that period did not dilute Columbia's standards, and "there is no reason to believe it would do so in the future."

The Dean cited possible expansion of dormitory facilities to accommodate such an increase. He said that he was hopeful that in the foreseeable future the entire facilities of John Jay Hall might be available for the exclusive use of the College. The total capacity of all four of the residence halls—Hartley, Livingston, Fernald and John Jay—is in excess of 1,500; he declared.

Since only half of the College students now live on campus, with the other half commuting, the Dean explained that the College might make a virtue out of necessity by increasing the ratio of resident to non-resident students. In order to do this, he added, scholarship funds in the College would have to be increased "so that some students who are now obliged to commute could afford to live on campus."

"It must be admitted, however," the Dean commented, "that because Columbia stresses quality education, the first reaction to this entire problem is to 'hold the line'. In other words, the question of quantity is one to be left to public institutions."

The Dean added, "I am not unsympathetic to this view, but I am not sure that one can apply automatically this principle to the situation now prevalent."

He then posed the question of what might happen if all private institutions considered only the problem of quality, and foresaw these results:

Only 25 per cent of those desiring higher education would be admitted to private institutions, compared to 50 per cent today. This would be true despite the increased number of students seeking admission. Thus, the percentage attending private institutions would shrink to a dangerously low level.

Alumni and parents would resent the failure of private institutions to accept their proper share of the responsibility for meeting the increase in eligible applicants.

Business and foundations, dedicated to the concept of a dynamic society, would not support such a static policy.

It would impose a greater burden on government supported in-

Name Officers For Varsity C

Ewen C. Anderson '21, a vice president of the Radio Corporation of America, has been elected president of the Varsity C Club. He succeeds Thomas M. Kerrigan '28, who had served three terms as president.

The announcement of the complete slate of new officers was made at the 34th Annual Varsity C Club awards banquet by Harold A. Rousselot '29 chairman of the nominating committee. One hundred and forty nine new members were initiated into the organization, and as a symbol of membership received their "Varsity C".

A feature of the program, held on March 31st in John Jay Hall and attended by more than 200 members, was the awarding of an honorary Varsity C to Edward T. Kennedy, Columbia swimming coach for 44 years. Coach Kennedy will retire this June.

Guest speakers at the dinner included President Grayson Kirk; Dean Lawrence H. Chamberlain; and Dr. Albert C. Jacobs, a long time professor of law at Columbia, provost of the University under General Eisenhower when the latter was president, and now president of Trinity College.

The new Varsity C Club officers are: Ewen C. Anderson '21, president; James L. Campbell '30, first vice-president; John W. Fiske Jr. '29, second vice president; Ralph Longworth '56, third vice president; M. Jennings von der Hyde '28, treasurer; and Leonard T. Scully '32, secretary. The new officers will serve for one year.

stitutions, and ultimately the taxpayer.

Furthermore, the Dean warned, if public supported institutions have to expand because of the failure of private colleges to absorb applicants, it can only mean further depletion of the facilities of private institutions. He noted that Columbia has already lost a number of its "very best teachers" because the salary scale of state and municipal institutions is considerably higher.

More than 100 key alumni heard the Dean's speech, including class presidents, committeemen of the Columbia College Fund, members of the Columbia College Council, and other guests.

Wall Street "Laboratory" For Students

The unique advantage of Columbia's location has once again been demonstrated.

It happened when Roscoe C. Ingalls '12 arranged recently for students in Professor Robert E. Carey's Economics 5 course to tour New York City's financial district. Thus the financial center of the world became a vast "laboratory", as students saw Wall Street in action—from the New York Stock Exchange to Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Beane, from the Federal Reserve Bank to Mr. Ingalls' own investment firm, Ingalls and Snyder.

The tour lasted all day and in the process, as Professor Carey noted, "The abstract nature of Economics became reality to the group."

He explained, "In the classroom we describe at some length the question of expanding and contracting the total supply of money in the economy and their effects. This important point of economic theory should have much greater significance to students after visiting the Federal Reserve Bank, and a large commercial bank."

More than 100 students participated in the tour which began at the American Stock Exchange with a brief talk on the history and function of exchanges. The students were then divided into three groups, each group following a different time schedule to avoid congestion.

The groups moved from stock exchanges to commercial banks, from the brokerage firms to odd-lot houses.

The enthusiasm of the students—as reflected in the questions they asked of the guides and the comments they made—was best summed up by a junior from Salt Lake City who said, "This trip is a fine experience for us and is just what the College announcement promised we would get."

This marks the second successive year that Mr. Ingalls has sponsored a Wall Street tour. Of his generosity, Professor Carey declared, "I can't repeat too often that all the credit belongs to Mr. Ingalls for making it possible for our undergraduates to take advantage of the laboratory which literally surrounds Columbia College."

Mark Van Doren

By JACK N. ARBOLINO '42

I am guilty of hero worship, and I commit it knowingly. I write of Mark Van Doren and cannot hope to do him justice. The goal has been missed before. Late in the war his friends gathered at the Algonquin in his honor. For some three hours a succession of men—teachers, editors, writers—all articulate, all, I think devoted to him and moved by the occasion, tried to say the best way they could how fine he was. What they said was not enough.

Professor Everett in his excellent chapter in "A History of Columbia College on Morningside," does a thumbnail sketch of Mark Van Doren that is clearly touched with love. Everett quotes from Van Doren's "The Noble Voice." Van Doren writing of the wonders, the complex construction of the "Iliad" says, "The effort required is never mentioned, it is only made, and made with success that deceives us." Professor Everett's point is that this may in fact be said of Mark Van Doren as a teacher. No student would dispute it.

Everett's sketch is beautifully packed, and as I said, touched with love, but it too, isn't enough. What remains? Can we hope to get a picture of this man from the successful, grateful writers who praise him in their books? I think not.

We can say he is a wonderful poet (I think that would please him most); he is a novelist, a scholar, and he is a great teacher. We should at least tell what he has accomplished and try to say how fine he is. It can't be done. Let it all pass; the goal, missed again.

We cite merely his integrity, clarity, scope and force; give thanks for his courage, for his gentle pull and pushes. We can say one thing simply—he is the cause of good in other men and we can read just one of his poems.

Soul & Circumstance

Wait not, my soul on circumstance;

It does not wait for you.

It nibbles at you new, and will devour you; I say true.

For I have seen its hungry face

Be satisfied with one

That stood like you, uncertain

here,

Thinking himself alone.

And so he was; but circumstance

Was not the friend he lacked.

He had not yet the bitter taste

And strength of his own act.

Inspired sweet, he still denied

Himself and his great kind.

And so I saw him eaten through

And spit away like rind.

Presidents

"Our College," Mr. Berg added, is now served by the College Council, the Alumni Association, and the alumni classes themselves. The class, of course, is the foundation of every activity."

Mr. Curtiss said that the "great strength we have is pride in our classes." He traced the history of the present Society back to 1947 when there was a serious attempt to organize class presidents.

"Now," he noted, the Society is a reality. It is well underway and can do a fine job for the classes."

Mr. Garfield called on John S. Henry '30, chairman of the Committee on Constitution and By-Laws, who reported that the organization's name had been changed in order to avoid any conflict with the Alumni Association.

Mr. Garfield then announced that a model class constitution had been prepared by Mr. Henry's committee, and would be forwarded in May to class officers. He urged that each class adopt it according to its individual needs.

(Advance copies of the model constitution may be obtained by communicating with Mr. Garfield at 1430 Third Avenue, New York 28, New York, RH 4-0755.)

Guests of the Society present at the dinner, and introduced to the group by Mr. Garfield, included: Thomas Witter Chrystie '24, Alumni Trustee; Morris W. Watkins '24, executive secretary of the Alumni Federation; Albert G. Redpath '18, vice president of the Alumni Federation; Robert Haron, assistant to the president of the University; and Bernard P. Ireland '31, in charge of College Admissions.

Notice of Meeting

The next meeting of the Executive Committee of the Society of Class Presidents will be on Wednesday, May 11, at 3:30 P.M. in the Clinton Room of the Columbia University Club, 4 West 43rd Street.

Lion Afield

By HOWARD LEVINE
Director, Sports Information

If the importance of alumni interest in Columbia activities needs any demonstration, may we offer the story of Columbia's National Collegiate champion fencing team of 1955. The witness is coach Irv DeKoff and the "heroes" are Irwin Bernstein '54 and Ted Reuter '54.

"One of my biggest problems at the start of the season," DeKoff recalls, "was the lack of experienced fencers—particularly in epee. We had only two of the nine starters from an undefeated, double-champion (Eastern and N.C.A.A.) team back—but none in epee."

"So without any inducement at all, other than his own desire to help Columbia, Irwin Bernstein began working with the epeemen. He devoted hours to coaching sophomores Nyles Ayers and Ray Ogren. His work payed off."

"Ayers and Ogren absorbed enough of Bernstein's teaching to lead the epee team to the Eastern championship. Ayers had 7-4 and Ogren 9-2 in that competition, with Ayers placing second in the individuals. At the National championships, Ayers had a 21-5 record and placed second although he fended like a champion."

DeKoff continued, this time on the contributions of Ted Reuter.

"Ted was my freshman coach this year while finishing up his studies in the School of Engineering, but his "extra" contribution came in the Nationals. They were held at East Lansing, Michigan, far away from any friendly faces for our three-man team. I was unable to spend much time with them, since all coaches have to officiate at the championships."

"So Ted took over. He arranged to have his job interview with Chrysler Motors in Detroit on Wednesday before the championships and then made his way to East Lansing on Thursday, when we arrived."

"At the Nationals we wound up first by five points and captain Harry Pariser won the individual saber title."

Fellowship Fund As Memorial to Edman

Shortly after the death of Irwin Edman last September 4, several of those who were closest to him prepared a plan to perpetuate his memory at Columbia. They decided on the Irwin Edman Fellowship Fund, for the beloved professor's own department of philosophy. This would be a "lasting memorial that would adequately reflect his contribution to the society that he adorned."

Irwin Edman had himself been very concerned about increasing the available fellowships in philosophy, and those of his colleagues and students who knew this contributed even before the Fund was made public. A full fellowship needs more than $50,000; over $5,000 has been secured so far. One gift was for $1,000, but it was all the little gifts of one and fifty dollars that have put the Fund at its present figure.

Contributions, payable to Columbia University, may be sent to the treasurer of the Irwin Edman Fellowship Fund, Albert G. Redpath, 52 Wall Street, New York 5, New York.

Fund Scholars Prove To Be Campus Leaders

(This is the second of three articles on scholarship students in Columbia sponsored by the College Fund.)

If you should call a roll of the 124 students whose scholarships are financed by the Columbia College Fund, those answering would include the president of the Blue Key Society, an associate editor of Spectator, the president of Sigma Chi fraternity, and a vice president of the Varsity C Club.

Also, the president of the freshman class, the captain of the swimming team, the president of the Columbia College Political Assembly, and a member of the sophomore class steering committee, to name a few others.

Survey Made

This was revealed by a study of the scholarship students where-in questionnaires were forwarded to the group, requesting a detailed breakdown of extra-curricular activities. One hundred and fourteen students responded to the questionnaires. Out of the total, seventy-four recorded participation in three or more activities, twenty students in two activities, and nineteen in one activity. Only one student failed to indicate participation in any form of extra curricular activity.

Where the students find the time for these activities is another question, and not an easy one to answer. For example, more often than not they must burn the midnight oil, knowing that scholarships are lost if grades fail to match academic requirements.

Then too, as they soon discover, a scholarship is not a free ride financially. "Transportation costs" down the four year road of education average $1,900 annually. The average scholarship stipend: less than $700.

Thus, part-time employment to supplement scholarships has become in itself a major extra-curricular activity. Yet the students manage to round out their four years by participating in athletic, club, fraternity, and other activities.

Senior Record Good

Of the twenty members of the Class of 1955 who are College Fund sponsored students, seventeen have participated in three or more such activities. Fifteen of the group held key positions, ranging from presidents of fraternities to captain of the swimming team, from an associate producer of the WKCR Economics Review to Senior Class Ring Chairman, etc.

In the class of 1956, with information available on all but six of the thirty-six Fund sponsored students, seventeen have been engaged in three or more activities, six in two activities, and seven have taken part in at least one activity. Positions of leadership have been held by sixteen of the group. (a track manager, a dormitory council representative, a fraternity scribe, and the captain of the rifle team, to name a few).

The sophomores, and especially the freshmen, still have a long road to hoe. Still many show promise of outstanding records in the area of extra-curricular endeavor.

Sophs Are Active

Thirty sophomores are sponsored by the Fund. With information available on twenty-eight of them, nineteen have participated in three or more activities, seven in two activities, and the remainder in one activity. Included is a member of the social affairs committee, a manager of the track team, a member of the class steering committee, and a member of the business staff of Spectator.

Of the thirty-eight freshmen sponsored by the Fund, thirty-six reported on their activities as follows: twenty-one are engaged in three or more activities, seven in two activities, and the rest in one. They range from membership in the Glee Club to freshman football, from the Columbia Players to the Pre-Law Society.

Arthur Jansen, Class Organization Chairman of the Standing Committee of the Association, is of the opinion, shared by the officers of each of the Classes, that a comparing of plans and projects will be most helpful toward solidifying strong alumni interest.

The Class Scholarship Fund has grown since the 25th Reunion was announced. Presently there is a total of $56,214.84; $2,140 of this amount will be appropriated through the Dean's Office for scholarship grants this year. . . . Harold F. McGuire, the Fund Chairman, and William Petersen, Vice Chairman, are continuing their solicitations in the Class and welcome all contributions.

Commencement Day Eventful for College Alumni

Commencement Day—June 1, 1955—unfolded in its traditionally colorful and inspiring fashion.

In addition to the Commencement Exercises for the awarding of degrees by President Grayson Kirk to more than 6,000 graduates, and honorary degrees to twelve outstanding citizens, the highlights of the day included the election of George V. Cooper '17 as president of the Alumni Federation, the awarding of Alumni Medals by the Federation for alumni service and the presentation to Dr. Kirk of anniversary class gifts to the College.

Among the recipients of an honorary degree is Dr. Dino Bigonziari '02, who was awarded a Doctor of Letters. Dr. Bigonziari is Da Ponte Professor Emeritus of Italian in the University.

Mr. Cooper is vice president of White Swan Inc., in Yonkers, New York. His election as Federation president came at the organization's annual meeting in John Jay Hall preceding the Commencement Exercises. He succeeds Frederick vP. Bryan, who has just completed four one-year terms as president.

Introducing "Leo"

Just as Hollywood has its "Oscar" and Broadway its "Tony" Columbia now has its "Leo." Or it will have if the name catches on.

"Leo" was suggested by Wayne Van Orman '28 as an appropriate nickname for the miniature bronze Columbia Lion awarded for alumni service. Mr. Van Orman welcomes alumni comment on his suggestion.

The new alumni award is a miniature replica of the statue of the Columbia Lion at Baker Field. The original, dedicated in 1924 by President Butler, was a gift of the Class of 1899.

Re-elect Wayne Van Orman President of the Association

Wayne Van Orman '28 has been re-elected president of the Alumni Association for the year 1955-56.

Mr. Van Orman's re-election—as well as the re-election of Aaron W. Berg '24 as vice president and Berton J. Delmhorst '29 as treasurer—were confirmed at the Association's annual meeting on May 16 in the Columbia University Club attended by more than 125 members and guests.

Hogan Says College Fund Will Achieve '55 Goals If—!

Predicting the Columbia College Fund will set a new record this year, its General Chairman Frank S. Hogan '24 has declared that the "real test" is whether the Fund can achieve the goals determined by the actual needs of the College.

The dollar goal, he said, is $275,000, and the participation goal, 6,000 donors.

In a report to alumni marking the final phase of the 4th College Fund, Mr. Hogan stated that as of June 10—three weeks before the end of the current campaign—the Fund had received $223,976.12 from 4,513 alumni, parents and friends.

His conclusion: The Fund can succeed only if the many alumni who have given to Columbia in other years, but have not yet contributed this year, forward their gift immediately.

"With our College facing higher costs and greater responsibilities, alumni support is more important than ever before," Mr. Hogan emphasized.

Class Participation

Reviewing class participation in the Fund, Mr. Hogan expressed delight at the record of some of the younger classes, citing in particular '48, '54, and '55.

"The Class of 1948," he said, "has made steady progress. Last year they gave a total of 144 gifts to the Fund. This year, to date, they have contributed 195 gifts."

The record of participation of '54 and '55 is "truly inspiring," Mr. Hogan declared. He noted that '55 has achieved over 86 per cent participation—the highest in the Fund history.

Turning to industry support, Mr. Hogan cited the gifts of the General Electric Company, which matched dollar-for-dollar the gifts to the Fund of several GE employees who are College alumni.

He also expressed gratitude to the CBS Foundation Inc. for a gift totaling $2,000 given in recognition of the service to CBS of one of their executives Benjamin F. Feiner '26.

Mr. Hogan reported that two foundation gifts have been realized through "devoted efforts of Fund Committeemen." They include a gift of the Goldsmith Foundation credited to '19, and one from the O&C Foundation, Inc. credited to '26.

Finally, Mr. Hogan praised all of the committeemen of the Fund whose efforts, he said, are "sincerely appreciated and of immediate as well as long range benefit to our College."

The College Fund was organized by the alumni four years ago to raise funds for alumni class sponsored scholarships and other general purposes of the College. The first Fund raised $136,000 from 3,395 contributors, the second $180,310 from 3,775 contributors, and last year's Fund $252,021 from 4,675 contributors. Currently the alumni classes support 124 scholarship students in the College.

Earlier the group had been addressed by Mr. Berg, chairman of the Association's Standing Committee, who submitted his annual report on 1954-55 activities, terming the past year one of "real accomplishment," and predicting a "banner year" ahead.

John S. Henry '30 has been elected secretary, succeeding Walter R. Mohr '13 who retired recently after long-time service with the Association.

The meeting also featured a vote on a proposed amendment to the Constitution, and presentation of special awards in the form of bronze Columbia Lions—later nicknamed the "Leo" by Mr. Van Orman—and Bicentennial Medallions for "alumni service during the Bicentennial year."

Standing Committee Members

Candidates proposed for the Standing Committee and elected unanimously are: Theodore C. Garfield '24, member to serve until the 1956 annual meeting; Ernest de la Ossa '37, member to serve until the 1957 annual meeting; Walter R. Mohr '13, Dwight C. Miner '26, John W. Fiske, Jr. '29, and Robert E. Friou '38, members to serve until the 1958 annual meeting.

In his keynote address citing the high spots of the 139th year of Association activity, Mr. Berg announced an increase of seven per cent over last year's membership, but added that the latest total of 5,761 members represented substantially less than one-third (Continued on Page 8)

See You in the Fall

By WAYNE VAN ORMAN '28
President of the Association of the Alumni of Columbia College

With publication of this issue "Columbia College Today" takes its first summer hiatus. Behind us now are four issues; ahead, resumption of our publishing schedule in Fall, complete, we hope, with an advisory board of alumni to guide and strengthen editorial policy.

Your comments on our "pioneer" issues are indeed welcome; so too are your suggestions for improving future editions.

As we have said before, ours is a modest endeavor, but within this framework we feel much can be done to promote a better understanding of the role of the alumnus in campus affairs. By holding up a mirror to alumni activities we serve too to reflect Columbia's exciting program for the years ahead, its problems, its progress and achievements.

Similarly we seek to reflect professional accomplishments, to boast, if you will, of the contributions of Columbia men to science, letters, business and government.

In closing, let me express gratitude, on behalf of the Alumni Association, to those who have put "Columbia College Today" together—its editor, Jerry Miller; his loyal adviser in matters of layout and production, George L. McKay, Jr. '48; and several guest contributors.

Post Gift To Edman Fund

A gift of $5,000 to the Irwin Edman Fellowship Fund has been announced by the New York Post Foundation "in memory of Richard Manson" former general manager of The Post who died last year.

Mr. Manson, Class of 1923, was a student of Dr. Edman's. They established a close personal friendship and Manson frequently remarked that Edman had urged him to remain at Columbia in an academic post.

In acknowledging the gift of The Post Foundation, Dr. James Gutmann, chairman of the Philosophy Department, wrote the publisher of The Post:

"My colleagues and others to whom I have spoken have been moved, as I was, by the feeling which led you to memorialize Richard Manson in this way and to assist in helping future students to gain something of what he did from Irwin Edman."

The Fund now reports a total of over $10,000. To establish a full fellowship in philosophy will cost at least $50,000. Contributions, payable to Columbia University, may be sent to the treasurer of the Irwin Edman Fellowship Fund, Albert G. Redpath, 52 Wall Street, New York 5, New York.

Anniversary Edition Stirs Memories

Alumni seeking a unique way to record the history of their class are sure to find inspiration in a handsomely bound volume just published by the Class of 1923.

Called the "Columbian 30th Anniversary Edition"—and representing two years of a "labor of love" by its editor, Aaron Fishman, and assistants, Charles A. Wagner, Milton Rosenauer, and others—the 108-page pictorial volume records a 30 year span in the history of the Class, and of Columbia.

The book was unveiled by the Class at its annual dinner on May 3 at the Columbia University Club.

Pre-subscribed by Class members, the edition is crammed with Columbia lore.

Mr. Fishman, its editor, has announced that mimeographed copies of the complete production and promotion plan of the Anniversary Edition are available to all classes, and may be obtained by writing to: Editor, Columbia College Today, Box 575, 4 West 43 Street, New York 38, New York; or to the Society of Class Presidents, c/o Theodore C. Garfield, 1430 Third Avenue, New York 28, New York.

A copy of the book itself may be obtained by sending a money order or check for $5.30 (to cover mailing costs), to the Class of '23 treasurer, Edward G. McLaughlin, 17 East 49th Street, New York 17, New York. The book is available for reference purposes at Butler Library or in the Columbian Room of Low Memorial Library.

Members of the Class of 1955 Columbia College Fund Committee study a "thermometer" on campus which registers the record-breaking number of contributions by their class to the current campaign. Over 86 per cent of the class contributed—the highest percentage of participation of any class in the history of the College Fund. In the picture above are: Back row, left to right, J. Robert Tuthill, David Stevens; front row, left to right, Gerry Pomper, Paul Frank, and Jack Orcutt. Pointing to the chart: Thomas L. Chrystie, chairman of the Fund Committee.

Roar Lion Roar

From the "prolific output of his twenty-five years of literary journalism," Clifton Fadiman '25, has put together a collection of his best and most characteristic work under the title of "Party of One." "Any time you pick it up," reports the New York Times book critic Orville Prescott, "you can be sure of stimulating contact with a man who knows his own mind and who expresses himself with vigorous skill." Published by World.

Dr. John Kingsley Lattimer '35 has been appointed director of the Presbyterian Hospital's urological service, and Professor of Urology and executive officer of Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Armand G. Erpf '17 has been elected a director of two major corporations—Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., and Minute Maid Corporation, Inc. Mr. Erpf is a general partner in Carl M. Loeb, Rhoades and Company.

Formerly the technical editor of American Aviation magazine, Walter A. Kilrain '48, is now a member of the Public Information staff at the General Electric Research Laboratory.

Recently the New York Times ran a full page ad in—appropriately enough—the New York Times, hailing its foreign staff for winning an Overseas Press Club award. Part of the staff was pictured on the page, including these Columbia men, all foreign correspondents: Leonard H. Ingalls '42, South Africa; Harry Schwartz '40, Soviet Affairs; Arthur O. Sulzberger '51, France.

If your name appeared in the New York Times last year, Joseph C. Gephart '25 no doubt has a record of it. Mr. Gephart is the editor of the New York Times Index, which records the day-by-day history of the world. The 1954 edition, a 1,227 page volume, has just been published.

Ellis B. Gardner '40, vice-president of Hewitt-Robins, Inc., has been appointed a director of the company. Mr. Gardner, who joined the company in 1946, was recently named general manager of Hewitt-Robins Restfoam division.

To the City Center this spring came Emerson Buckley '36 to conduct "Rigoletto," "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" for the New York City Opera Company. Critics described his performances as "excellent." Said New York Mirror critic Robert Coleman '22: "Always a dynamic conductor, he (Mr. Buckley) now has added polish on the podium. He is graceful and exciting to watch."

Ernest de la Ossa '37, former manager of WRCA and WRCA-TV is now assistant to the president of W. R. Grace & Co. On the agenda, reports Mr. de la Ossa, will be "considerable international travel."

The new head coach of the Toronto Argonauts, professional football team, is William Swiacki '48. He is former assistant coach of the New York Football Giants. An all-American pass-catching end at Columbia, Bill and team-mate Gene T. Rossides '49 formed the unbeatable combination that snapped Army's 32-game winning streak back in 1947.

Otto V. St. Whitelock '24 has been appointed editorial director of Funk & Wagnalls, book publishing firm. Last year Mr. Whitelock wrote the Columbia University Bicentennial Ode,

Alumni Supported Scholars Know Where They're Going

(This is the final article on scholarship students in Columbia sponsored by the alumni classes through the Columbia College Fund.)

"I wish to be a writer, but am taking courses helpful in a business career as well."

So wrote a scholarship student in answer to a query concerning his professional career. He is one of 124 students whose scholarships are sponsored by the alumni classes through contributions to the college fund.

Apparently this young man seeks to combine business with art, inspired perhaps by the post-insurance executive Wallace Stevens who mixes metaphors with premium notices. Or perhaps he simply isn't taking any chances. Whatever the reason, his future plans—and those of his compatriots—provide a significant random sample of the hopes, dreams and aspirations of the Columbia student body.

Engineers Wanted

In this age of the electronic brain and Yucca Flat it is not surprising to find more students indicating a preference for engineering (23 of the 114 who responded to the query) than any other profession. That they will be quickly absorbed into the technological bloodstream is reasonably assured by the neon nature of the "help wanted" ads both daily and Sunday. Engineers may be a party to automation; they seem hardly likely to be its victims.

At the other end of the scale—with no perceptible demand for manpower either daily or Sunday—is motion picture production, in which one student is interested. Other fields attractive to one student each include sales, public and industrial relations, chemistry, music, writing, actuarial mathematics and architecture.

Second only to engineering in appeal is medicine. Fifteen of the scholarship group are pre-med students, including one who has already staked out a practice "somewhere in South Texas." Dentistry, on the other hand, appeals to only three of the group, none of whom predict a practice in Texas.

Teaching Ranks Third

Encouraging statistically, in view of the critical shortage of teachers, is the fact that teaching ranks third in career preferences among the scholarship students. It outputs law by three students, and business by four. This is a tribute to the congenially intellectual atmosphere of the College where professors, in being good teachers, inspire others to teach.

Less encouraging, when one considers America's global headaches, is the number of students interested in State Department service—only two.

Eighteen of the students register "undecided" for the moment.

But while the mold of their future is thus being cast, these alumni class sponsored students go about the equally serious business of maintaining good grades and a lively interest in fraternity, club, athletic, political and social affairs.

They and Columbia are the better for it.

which has been printed and distributed under the title of "Tribute".

John H. Cox '40 has been named manager of tufted carpet sales for Mohawk Carpet Mills. According to "Retailing Daily," Mr. Cox is "one of the first men in the industry to publicly recognize the potential offered by the tufting process."

More than 100 members of the Board of Realtors of Eastern Bergen County attended a May luncheon meeting to hear Robert S. Curtiss '27 discuss the effects of New York Port Authority activities on residents of the Metropolitan Area. Mr. Curtiss, who is president of his class, is director of the department of real estate of the Port Authority.

Joseph P. Peters '41 is the new administrator of the Beekman-Downtown Hospital. He has been on the hospital staff for thirteen years, the last two as deputy administrator.

Peter I. B. Lavan '15 has been named national chairman of the Unitarian Service Committee's annual appeal for funds to support its world-wide program.

Lieutenant Colonel Robert J. Haggstrom '41, USAF, will take over as Professor of Air Science and Air Force ROTC Detachment Commander at the University next Fall. Colonel Haggstrom will be the first alumnus to command one of the University's ROTC units.

To Laramie, Wyoming this month went Herbert C. Rosenthal '38 to participate in the annual National Project in Agricultural Communications. Mr. Rosenthal, who is planning director of Graphics Institute in New York City, lectured before agricultural economists and farm paper editors on methods of simple graphic presentation of data and statistics to farmers. . . . Mr. Rosenthal will do the same for school teachers when he heads out to Chicago in July to address editors of state teacher magazines at a workshop sponsored by the Educational Communications Service of the University of Chicago.

By special invitation of the International Council for Philosophy and Humanistic Studies, Professor William T. de Bary '41 journeys to Paris this month to participate in an inquiry into the possibilities of "broadening the teaching of the humanities." Dr. de Bary, assistant professor of Chinese and Japanese at the University, will meet at UNESCO House in the French capital with a dozen representatives of various "cultural traditions."

William C. Fels '37 has taken six month leave of absence as associate director of the College Entrance Examination Board to serve in an advisory capacity to the Ford Foundation. His title: executive secretary of the College Grants Advisory Committee. The Committee will administer a $50,000,000 allocation by the Foundation for improvement of faculty compensation in undergraduate liberal arts colleges and universities.

Watt Named By Trustees To New Post

Robert W. Watt '16

Robert W. Watt '16—one of Columbia's all-time great athletes—has been elected vice chairman of the Trustees of the University. The post is a new one, created by vote of the Trustees at their final meeting of the year on May 2.

Mr. Watt, who is president of the Seaboard Surety Company in New York City, has been an Alumni Trustee since 1950.

In the College Mr. Watt was president of his class and a star second baseman and captain of the championship '16 varsity baseball team, one of the best teams Columbia ever had. His own skill was such that he was sought by major league clubs.

However, Mr. Watt enlisted in the Army Air Force in World War I, serving as a pilot in France. Shortly after return to civilian life, he was named graduate manager of athletics at Columbia, a post he held until 1924.

Long active in alumni affairs, Mr. Watt is a member of the Columbia College Council, and a past member of the executive committee of the Alumni Federation, the Committee on Athletics, and the Standing Committee of the Alumni Association.

announced an anniversary gift of $50,000 for endowment of one scholarship in the College, and one in the Engineering School for students who have entered from the College. In addition, he said, the class has contributed $7,000 for "other useful purposes."

Ray N. Spooner '15, president, announced a class contribution of approximately $8,000 to the College Fund, over $14,000 to the Engineering Center and $800 for a scholarship in the Engineering School for a student who has entered from the College.

Edward M. Healy '20, representing president Ronald M. Craigmyre, said that class gifts totaling $42,000 have helped to "make the Field House at Baker Field a reality."

Active anniversary class support of the College Fund was reported by the following presidents: Arthur Jansen '25, William Sanford '30, Julius Impellizzeri '40, John W. Noonan '50, Calvin Lee '55; also, Louis H. Robinson '10, representing Francis N. Bangs, president; and Allen H. Toby '35, representing Alan L. Gornick, president.

President Grayson Kirk sets the cornerstone in place at a ceremony on April 30 marking the dedication of the new wing of the Field House at Baker Field. Looking on is Ralph J. Furey '28, Director of Athletics.

Life-Size Bust Of Harry Carman In College Study

A life-size bust of Columbia's beloved Dean Emeritus Harry J. Carman now stands in the College Study of Butler Library.

The work of noted sculptress Ruth Brall, the bust is a gift to the College by the New York Adult Education Council Incorporated. Its unveiling took place on May 26 in a reception in the Study attended by fifty friends and associates of Dr. Carman.

Professor Dwight C. Miner, who presided at the affair, said that the bust represented "a tribute to Dr. Carman's many contributions to adult education through his work with the Council, as well as his long and devoted service to Columbia and other institutions."

Other speakers included Thomas Cotton, president of the New York Adult Education Council; Mrs. Brall; Dean Lawrence H. Chamberlain; and Dr. Carman himself.

Dr. Carman has been on the Columbia faculty since 1917. He succeeded Herbert E. Hawkes as Dean in 1943, retiring in 1950. He resumed teaching, and has continued his many other activities in the field of higher education.

would take place on June 18 to "review the past and explore future plans of the Association."

In closing he reminded the members that much remains to be done, adding, "I hope that with your help and cooperation we can do even more effective work and make the year 1955-56 a banner year."

Later in the meeting President Van Orman submitted for approval — unanimously given — a proposed amendment to the Constitution whereby twenty-four rather than twelve regular members shall constitute the Standing Committee in the future. The additional twelve members, he explained, must reside more than 75 miles from New York City and be representative of the geographical distribution of the alumni.

The remainder of the meeting was devoted to the presentation of awards. To the following alumni went a "Leo" (bronze Columbia Lion):

Walter R. Mohr '13, "in recognition of his many years of loyal and devoted service in the interests of Columbia College."

Joseph D. Coffee, Jr. '41, "in recognition of his outstanding contribution to all phases of the development of Columbia College."

J. Robert Tuthill '55, "who during his undergraduate years has done the most to develop the interest of his Class in and foster relationship with the Columbia Alumni Association to the end of its continuing activity in the affairs of Columbia College."

In awarding Bicentennial Medallions for alumni service (recipients listed elsewhere on this page), Dean Lawrence H. Chamberlain observed that "while both educational and business organizations employ the very best people they can get, I am convinced that the real strength of an educational organization cannot depend on the paid employees but rather on the unpaid volunteer."

"Therefore," the Dean concluded, "Columbia is coming to depend more and more on the strength, help and loyal work of the alumni."

of the membership potential.

Mr. Berg lauded the efforts of the twenty-one committees and approximately 150 key alumni "who have done a job in terms of time, effort and results equal to many times that number."

He added, "We have interested many more alumni in the work of the Association. We have strengthened old areas of activity. We have carried on in the fine tradition of our predecessor committees and have entered into and explored many new fields."

Here Mr. Berg expressed the personal hope that with the implementation of the Hatch Report Association dues would be eliminated "in the very near future."

Mr. Berg explained that much time had been spent during the year by the Standing Committee, and a special committee headed by Daniel J. Reidy '29, in studying the Hatch Report, from which, he predicted, many benefits would accrue to the College. (The Hatch Committee was appointed by the president of the Alumni Federation to conduct a comprehensive survey of the relationship of the University with the Federation and the total alumni body. Its chairman is Vermont Hatch '16L.)

"Highly Successful"

Reviewing alumni affairs during the past year, Mr. Berg termed as "highly successful" the Fall Homecoming, Dean's Day, and the April meeting in Earl Hall of the Standing Committee, sponsored by the Campus Religious Affairs Committee in which the Earl Hall staff described to Committee members and guests the expanded religious program on the campus.

Mr. Berg then announced that a meeting of representatives of the Association and the College,

Record Is Set By The College Fund in 1955

The most successful campaign in the four-year history of the Columbia College Fund has been announced by its general chairman, Frank S. Hogan '24. Mr. Hogan reported that 5,976 alumni, parents and friends have contributed a total of $344,991.17, exceeding last year's record by 1,301 contributions and $92,969.89.

Nearly five times as many alumni contribute to Columbia today, as in any year prior to the formation of the College Fund in 1951. For a ten-year period from 1941 to 1950, some nine per cent of the alumni contributed to the College. This year the participation figure is almost 29 per cent.

A Record of Progress

Tracing the steady growth of the Fund, Mr. Hogan pointed out that the 1955 campaign set a new high for the fourth year in a row. The 1st Annual Columbia College Fund, under general chairman Arnold T. Koch '21, raised $136,700 from 1,560 contributors. The following year the 2nd Fund, headed by Walter D. Fletcher '18, received $180,310 from 3,775 contributors. In 1953-54, General Chairman of the 3rd Annual Fund, Benjamin J. Buttenwieser '19, reported a grand total of $252,021 from 4,675 contributors.

Younger Classes Lead

Attributing the Fund's expansion to greater alumni understanding of the needs of the College, Mr. Hogan cited as "particularly encouraging" the fact that four of the five leading classes in participation this year are those of younger alumni.

"The Class of 1955, for example, has achieved the largest participation of any class, with over 83 per cent contributing while still undergraduates," Mr. Hogan said. The Fund chairman was Thomas L. Chrystie.

Second only to 1955 in participation is 1954 with approximately Symbolic of the threatening weather at the Homecoming Reunion on October 15 is the umbrella President Grayson Kirk holds protectively over Major General William J. Donovan '05 and Ewen C. Anderson '21, president of the Varsity C Club. Mr. Anderson has just presented to General Donovan the 15th Annual Alumni Athletic Award.

'Neither Wind, Rain Nor Fog...'

Bad weather dampened, but failed to extinguish, the festive spirit of the eighth Annual Homecoming Reunion at Baker Field on Saturday, October 15. Nearly 1,000 hardy alumni, their families and friends, braved continuous fog and drizzle, punctuated by frequent cloudbursts, to take part in activities preceeding the Columbia-Harvard football game.

The principal event of the morning was the presentation of the 15th Annual Alumni Athletic Award to Major General William J. Donovan '05, director of the Office of Strategic Services during World War II and former ambassador to Thailand.

Edward K. Everard '31, chairman of the Homecoming Reunion Committee, noted that it was the first time in the history of the affair at Baker Field that inclement weather had marred the occasion. He declared that "if the elements had cooperated, there is no doubt that attendance would have topped last year's record of 3,900 alumni."

Joint Undertaking

Homecoming festivities are a joint alumni-undergraduate event, sponsored by the Alumni Federation in cooperation with the Van Am and Blue Key Societies. A number of students attended the Reunion as guests of alumni.

The Alumni Reunion was the high point of a celebration which commenced October 12 with a four-day campus Homecoming program. Included in the program were performances of the Columbia Players, a joint concert of the Harvard-Columbia Glee Clubs, fraternity open houses, cocktail parties and informal dinners, the Homecoming Ball and services in St. Paul's Chapel.

Preceding the Athletic Award ceremony, President Grayson Kirk greeted the Reunion guests, hailing their "indomitable spirit and loyalty to Columbia for attending in spite of the weather."

The Athletic Award—a handsomely designed silver loving cup—was presented to General Donovan by Ewen C. Anderson '21, president of the Varsity C Club, in a brief ceremony conducted from a platform at the edge of the baseball diamond. The diamond served as the Homecoming Reunion area.

Award Given Annually

The Award has been given each year since 1940 to "an alumnus who has distinguished himself in Columbia's athletic history and who has maintained a strong interest in the College's athletic program since graduation." The first recipient was the late David W. Smyth, Class of 1902E. Last year's winner was Robert W. Watt '16, the recently elected vice chairman of the Trustees.

General Donovan was selected by an Alumni Athletic Award Committee composed of Mr. Anderson, Federation President George V. Cooper '17, Mr. Everard and Ralph J. Furey '28, Director of Athletics.

A member of the law firm of Donovan, Leisure, Newton, Lumbard and Irvine, General Donovan has had an illustrious military and diplomatic career. His achievements have earned him the Congressional Medal of Honor, Legion of Honor, Oak Leaf Cluster, to name a few outstanding citations. The College had previously honored him with its highest alumni award, the Alexander Hamilton Medal.

Curtiss '27 Heads Class Presidents

Robert S. Curtiss '27 has been named the first president of the Society of Class Presidents. His election and installation took place at the first annual meeting of the Society on September 28 in the new Alumni Wing of the Field House at Baker Field.

Before an audience of more than 150 class officers and guests, many of them presidents of classes covering a 50-year span from 1898 to 1958, Mr. Curtiss received from Association President Wayne Van Orman '28 the new gavel of the Society.

Mr. Curtiss is director of the Department of Real Estate for the Port of New York Authority, and president of the New York Y.M.C.A. He is vice president of the Real Estate Board of New York, Inc., permanent president of his class, and last year was chairman of the Deans Day Committee.

Other Officers Installed

Other high points of the affair—the first formal event in the newly dedicated Alumni Wing—were the installation with Mr. Curtiss of the other officers, and addresses by University President Grayson Kirk, Football Coach Lou Little, author Henry Morton Robinson '23, and Theodore C. Garfield '24, past chairman of the Society's executive committee. Toastmaster of the evening was Harold A. Rousselot '29.

Officers installed were Mr. Rousselot as vice president, and John F. Steeves '48 as secretary-treasurer. Mr. Rousselot is general partner of Francis I. Du Pont and Company, New York investment firm. Mr. Steeves is assistant to the executive vice president of

Dedicate New Alumni Wing at Field House

Ralph J. Furey '28, Director of Athletics, shows the beaming president of the Class of 1920, Ronald M. Craigmyle, the inscription in the Lounge of the new Alumni Wing of the Field House at Baker Field. It reads: "This Lounge Is The Generous Gift of the Class of 1920."

Hailed as the "ideal setting for alumni functions", the new $180,000 Alumni Wing of the Field House at Baker Field was dedicated on Saturday, September 16.

In a brief ceremony following the Columbia-Brown football game, President Grayson Kirk told an audience of more than 150 alumni, staff and guests that this "splendid occasion marks fulfillment of our original concept of expanding the Field House facilities."

He paid tribute to the benefactors of the new wing, citing in particular the late Ferris Booth, Class of 1924; Mrs. David W. Smyth, whose late husband was Class of 1902; and the Classes of 1920, 1928 and 1929.

Ralph J. Furey, Director of Athletics, who spearheaded the campaign to finance the Alumni Wing, has announced that it is available for all Columbia functions—dances, reunions, homecoming affairs, class meetings, pre-game and post-game gatherings. He called it the "ideal setting" for all such events.

The new building contains two large rooms—a Lounge and a Trophy Room—with smaller adjoining utility spaces. The Lounge measures 63 feet long by 45 feet wide and has a 19 foot ceiling.

At the far end of the Lounge is a striking onyx fireplace with an inscription above it reading "This Lounge Is The Generous Gift of the Class of 1920." The first portrait to be hung in the Lounge is that of the late Mr. Smyth who was a president of the Varsity C Club, president of the Class of 1902, and the first recipient (1940) of the Alumni Athletic Award.

Four large glassed French doors along the side of the Lounge provide entry onto a slate-covered terrace. The Lounge can also be entered from inside the building through the Trophy Room, which also performs the function of a lobby.

The Trophy Room is somewhat smaller than the Lounge, measuring 23 feet by 31 feet. On display throughout the year will be trophies attesting to Columbia's athletic achievements. In the room too is a plaque inscribed "In Affectionate Memory of Ferris Booth, Class of 1924."

Association Strengthens Alumni-Student Link

In its 140th year the Alumni Association is training its sights, more than ever before, on undergraduates and secondary school students.

Four committees—the Alumni Class Sponsors, Secondary Schools, Forum of Secondary School Representatives, and Undergraduate Affairs—are engaged in establishing more effective contact with these young men, whom Standing Committee Chairman Aaron W. Berg '24 has called the "very lifeblood of the College."

Committee activities range from advising undergraduate class officers to attending College Nights at suburban high schools, from sponsoring orientation lectures to bringing secondary school representatives to Columbia.

Collectively their objectives are these, according to Association President Wayne Van Orman '28: (1) to "plant the seed" of Columbia College firmly in the minds of desirable secondary school students, their principals and guidance counselors; (2) to solidify the class spirit and tradition of these students as undergraduates in the College; and (3) insure the perpetuation of that spirit as alumni.

New Lecture Series

The vocational orientation lecture series is an outstanding example of a committee program in action. Conceived and sponsored by the Undergraduate Affairs Committee, under the chairmanship of Frank E. Karelsen III '47, the lectures, compulsory for all freshmen, will take place on December 6, 13 and 20 in McMillin Theatre on the campus.

Two speakers will appear on each program, covering the fields of business, finance, engineering, law, medicine and government.

The speakers and their subjects are Benjamin J. Bittenwieser '19, partner, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, investment bankers (finance); Joseph D. McGoldrick '23, partner in the law firm of McGoldrick, Dannett, Horowitz and Golub, former State Rent Commissioner and past member of the College faculty (government); Winston Paul '09, chairman of the finance committee of General Aniline and Film Corporation (business).

Also, Daniel J. Reidy '29, general counsel for Guardian Life Insurance Company of America (law); Charles B. Spencer '07, partner in the engineering firm of Spencer, White and Prentiss, Inc. (engineering); and Dr. Harry I. Weinstock, attending psychiatrist at Mt. Sinai Hospital (medicine).

Citing the importance of "exposing students to the various facets, and opportunities, of a given profession", Chairman Karelsen expressed the hope that this pilot program would become a permanent feature of the freshman curriculum.

In a report to the Standing Committee, Professor Dwight C. Miner '26 and Robert E. Friou '38, co-chairmen of the Subcommittee on the Forum of Secondary School Representatives, described a new program which brought to the campus fifty principals and guidance officers from suburban secondary schools.

Two Day Session

Twenty-five private school representatives attended a two-day session on November 10 and 11. They were housed and fed in John Jay Hall; sat in on Contemporary Civilization and Humanities classes; toured the campus and Baker Field; attended roundtable discussions on undergraduate life, pre-professional advantages and admissions policy.

On November 15 and 16, twenty-five representatives from public schools participated in a similar program.

Professor Miner predicted that these educators—having seen the College in operation—would "give Columbia the boost it deserves when counseling their high school seniors about college applications."

"To foster interest in Columbia College on the part of students in high schools and preparatory schools" is the primary goal of the Committee on Secondary Schools. Chairman John C. Thomas, Jr. '48 declared that his committee also seeks to insure "balanced geographical representation of the student body—one-third from New York, one-third from an area within 50 miles of New York and one-third from more distant places."

Represent College

Committee members are speaking at "College Nights" at suburban schools, according to Chairman Thomas, who explained that these "unofficial ambassadors" serve to assure Columbia representation at such affairs.

In another phase of the program, alumni with sons approaching college age are being invited to participate—as are the sons—in conferences with Committee members. The purpose of these meetings: to review the educational opportunities in the College.

In carrying out its various activities,

Committee To Guide 'Today'

A major step forward in the development of COLUMBIA COLLEGE TODAY has been taken with the appointment of a nine-member editorial advisory board. The advisers, all College alumni, bring to their new post a broad range of experience in newspaper, publishing and allied fields.

Editorial supervision of "Today" is a primary responsibility of the group in their capacity as members of the recently organized Publications Committee of the Alumni Association. Chairman of the committee, which held its first meeting in September, is Hugh J. Kelly '26, vice president and director of McGraw-Hill Publishing Company.

Other objectives, according to Mr. Kelly, will be to review current alumni publications, and to consider the need for additional publications in order to "most effectively tell the College story to its alumni."

To Play Important Part

Mr. Kelly added that "within the framework of the overall publications program, COLUMBIA COLLEGE TODAY will play an integral part in linking the alumni more closely to the College."

Serving with Mr. Kelly on the Publications Committee are Charles A. Wagner '23, Sunday editor of the New York Mirror; Alfred D. Walling '24, news editor of the Newark Evening News; Thomas M. Jones '37, assistant managing editor of "Printers Ink"; Herbert C. Rosenthal '38, planning director of Graphics Institute.

Also, Joseph D. Coffee, Jr. '41, Director of Development of Columbia College; J. Robert Cherneff '42, account executive with the public relations firm of Robinson-Hannagan Associates Inc.; George L. McKay, Jr. '48, printing consultant; and Gene R. Hawes '49, former editor of the Alumni News, and now with the College Entrance Examination Board.

ities, the Secondary Schools Committee coordinates its planning with the Alumni Field Representatives program sponsored by the Deans Office, Mr. Thomas said. The Alumni Field Representatives contact high schools in their own communities to acquaint faculty and students with the advantages of Columbia College.

Chairman of the Class Sponsors Committee this year is Arthur Jansen '25, who has announced that a Sponsors' guide book is to be prepared outlining their duties. Vice chairman of the committee is John W. Fiske, Jr. '29.

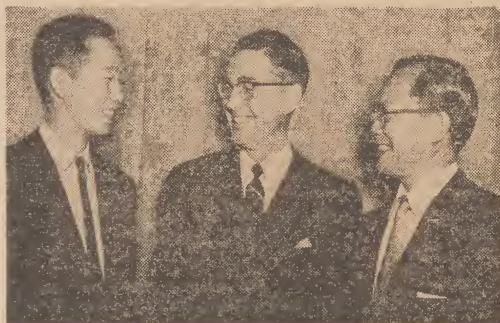

Mr. Jansen said good progress has already been made by individual Sponsors in "promoting class solidarity". He declared that Sponsors can "lay the foundation for a strong alumni class by recommending to undergraduate officers such projects as the establishment of a class treasury, the publishing of class letters and the development of an active social program."

Sponsors will continue to work with the classes after graduation in order to "consolidate their interest and support," Mr. Jansen added.

As chairman of the committee, Mr. Jansen automatically is the Sponsor for the senior class. Serving as Co-sponsor of 1956 is Saul Turtlebaugh '54.

Scholarship Winner

Thomas Moshang, Jr. '58, confers with his sponsor, Young Moshang, shown here with Dean Lawrence H. Chamberlain and the prominent restaurateur Sou Chan, became last year the second recipient of the four-year full tuition Chan Scholarship.

New Trustee

Henry W. Proffitt '19.

Henry W. Proffitt '19, '21L, has been named the fifty-second Alumni Trustee of the University. A senior member of the New York law firm of Thacher, Proffitt, Prizer, Crawley and Wood, Mr. Proffitt was elected to office by the Trustees at their first meeting of the 202nd academic year.

He succeeds as Alumni Trustee Maurice T. Moore, '16AM, '18L, whose term expired in September. Previously, however, in April, Mr. Moore was elected chairman of the Trustees and made a permanent member upon the expiration of his alumni term.

At any one time, six of the Trustees' official complement of twenty-four members are Alumni Trustees. Mr. Proffitt, as an Alumni Trustee, will serve the traditional six-year term in office.

Mr. Proffitt was admitted to the New York City Bar in 1922. He is chairman of the board of the Cornell Steamboat Company, a trustee of the Empire City Savings Bank, a director of Rall Brothers, Inc. of New York and a member of the title advisory committee of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company.

Association Marks 140th Anniversary

The Alumni Association celebrated its 140th anniversary on October 16 by continuing to move ahead on a program of activities which embraces virtually every aspect of College affairs.

Thus, the Association today bears little resemblance to the literary society which 140 years earlier had petitioned the University Trustees for a room in the College for "reading papers."

In marking the anniversary, President Wayne Van Orman '28 reported "substantial progress" this year in Association objectives. Among the achievements he listed were: the organization of the Society of Class Presidents to strengthen the alumni classes; the appointment to the Standing Committee of twelve regional representatives; the formation of a Publications Committee to study alumni publications; the establishment of a Women's Committee.

Four committees are devoting their efforts either to fostering interest in the College among secondary school students, or stimulating class spirit and tradition in the undergraduate body. A "Forum for Secondary Schools" has been held at Columbia, attended by principals, headmasters and college guidance officers.

Predicts Record Year

Last year total membership in the Association numbered 5,239 dues paying alumni. Over 3,900 alumni to date have paid their dues for 1955-56. In this regard Membership Chairman Ernest de la Ossa '37 predicts that enrollment this year will "exceed all previous records."

(A copy of the dues statement may be found on Page 7 of this issue. Alumni who have not paid their dues since July 1, 1955 are urged to use this form to bring their membership up to date.) Officers of the Alumni Association for the year 1955-56 are

Wayne Van Orman '28, president; Aaron W. Berg '24, vice president; John S. Henry '30, secretary; Berton J. Delmhorst '29, treasurer.

Standing Committee officers are Mr. Berg, chairman; Walter R. Mohr '13, vice chairman; and George F. Jenkins '28, regional vice chairman.

Standing Committee members to serve until the 1956 annual meeting are Theodore C. Garfield '24, Frank E. Karelsen, III '47, Randolph I. Thornton '28, John W. Wheeler '36.

Standing Committee members to serve until the 1957 annual meeting are Ernest de la Ossa '37, Dr. Frederick E. Lane '28, Herbert C. Rosenthal '38, John C. Thomas '48.

R&H to Receive 1956 Hamilton Medal Award

Messrs. Rodgers '23 and Hammerstein '16, as they appeared in 1951 at the Alumni Federation Holiday Luncheon in the Columbia University Club.

The Alexander Hamilton Medal, the College's highest alumni award, will be conferred on two alumni whose careers launched on the campus have carried them to the heights of Broadway and Hollywood.

They are Richard Rodgers '23 and Oscar Hammerstein II '16.

Alumni Association President Wayne Van Orman '28 has announced that the authors of "Oklahoma", "Carousel" and "South Pacific", have been selected by a nominating committee to receive the 1956 award. The Medals—given annually by the Association to an alumnus or faculty member "for distinguished service and accomplishment in any field of human endeavor"—will be presented to the two men at a dinner on Wednesday, April 4, in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

The latest collaborative effort of Messrs. Rodgers and Hammerstein—entitled "Pipe Dream", an adaptation of the John Steinbeck novel "Sweet Thursday"—opened at the Shubert Theatre on November 30.

Lane Named Chairman

Mr. Van Orman also announced the appointment of Dr. Frederick Ellison Lane '28 as chairman of the Hamilton Dinner Committee. Named as vice-chairman is Howard E. Reinheimer '17, '19LLB.

In accepting the chairmanship, Dr. Lane predicted that this year's affair would be "the most successful in history." He noted that enthusiasm is such that "we already have received a $250 contribution from an alumnus for the music fund."

A main feature of the evening will be a "musical cavalcade of Rodgers and Hammerstein melodies", rendered by a twenty-six piece orchestra, according to Dr. Lane, who added that famous stars will sing the songs they performed in the original Broadway productions. He said that the repertoire will include the Varsity Show tunes of Rodgers and Hart.

Wrote With Hart

The late Lorenz M. Hart, Class of 1918, collaborated with Mr. Rodgers on the 1920 Varsity Show "Fly With Me". A year later, Rodgers and Hart brought out the musical comedy, "You'll Never Know", and soon after were the leading lights in the "Garlick Galettes".

Dr. Lane declared that "sponsors" are being sought for the younger classes, in order that these alumni might attend the affair at a reduced rate. He said that alumni of earlier classes interested in serving as sponsors should write him in care of the Hamilton Dinner Committee, 101 Hamilton Hall, Columbia College, New York 27, New York.

Dr. Lane added that the balcony of the Grand Ballroom will be reserved at a nominal price for undergraduates.

Cancelled in '54

Last year the Alexander Hamilton Dinner was cancelled due to the death of Frederick Coykendall, Class of 1895, former chairman of the University Trustees, who had been selected as the ninth annual recipient of the Medal. The Medal was awarded posthumously to Mr. Coykendall.

Winners in other years were: the late Nicholas Murray Butler, Columbia's 12th president; Dr. Frank D. Fackenthal '06, former acting president of the University; V. K. Wellington Koo '09, Chinese ambassador to the United States; Major General William Donovan '05, director of the Office of Strategic Services during World War II.

Also, Dr. Harry J. Carnfan, dean emeritus of the College; Dr. Carlton J. H. Hayes '04, Seth Low Professor Emeritus of History and former U.S. ambassador to Spain; Arthur Hays Sulzberger '13, president and publisher of the New York Times; and Frank S. Hogan '24, District Attorney of New York County.

"Make sure the sign is straight!" the man on the ground cautions the man on the ladder. The adviser is James Cuff, president of the Class of 1956. On the ladder is Max Eliason '56, chairman of the Board of Student Representatives.

'Walk' Pride Of Campus

Have you been on College Walk yet?

You knew it as 116 Street—a busy thoroughfare invading the privacy of the campus. But last year, when the street became an attractively landscaped and private esplanade, a more appropriate appellation was in order.

Accordingly, President Kirk appointed Dean Lawrence Chamberlain to head up a name-finding committee, composed of alumni, faculty and student representatives.

Sixty-five different names were considered. The selections were finally narrowed down to three, and these submitted to the Buildings and Grounds Committee of the University Trustees for consideration at the Trustees meeting last June. The choice was unanimous.

The next time you're on campus, why not stroll down College Walk.

Twenty-Five 'Alumni Sons' in Class of '59

Twenty-five members of the new freshman class are sons of Columbia alumni, according to Bernard P. Ireland '31, Associate Director of Admissions. Terming them "a very fine group, and representative of the overall high quality of the Class of 1959" Mr. Ireland named the "Alumni Sons" as follows:

Ross A. Abell (Ross A., Sr. '18); George Asch (Joseph '19); Stephen J. Basson (Milton B. '29); Daniel Boone, Jr. (Daniel '34); Gustave J. Danzer (Mortimer '34); Stephen J. Evans (David I. Rosenblum '18); Giles P. Erickson (Ellis W. '29); Thomas N. Guinsburg (Theodore '25).

Also, Carlos L. Henriquez, III

(Carlos L., Jr. '26); David A. Heymsfeld (Ralph T. '27); David Z. Kitay (Milton '20); Joseph M. Mirra (Charles Rechenberg '23); William G. Nevel (William B. '35); Michael Raskin (Eugene '30); William F. Sanford (William B. '30); John J. Schimmenti (John M. '20); Donald Schwarz (Arthur D. '20); George H. Semel (Louis B. '20).

Also, Bruce M. Schlein (David '28); Robert K. Sprower (Frank E. '25); Alfred G. Smith, Jr. (Alfred G., Sr. '34); Frederick J. Trost, Jr. (Frederick J., Sr. '25); Steven C. Van Voorhees (Stuart C. '32); Carl R. Walker (Thomas H. '28); Arthur S.M. Wood, Jr. (Arthur S.M. '33).

Lion Afield

By HOWARD LEVINE
Director, Sports Information.

At the beginning or ending of every pre-season story on Columbia's football prospects for 1955 was the admonition that the estimates of an improved team over 1954 were made "barring injuries to key men."

Probably the most important loss to injuries this year came in the Princeton game, the second game of the season. Toward the start of the second period the Lions had a first down on the Tiger 4. On the second play, from the two, sophomore Ed Spraker smashed into the line for a yard and ended his playing for the day and the next three games right there. Spraker, who has been tabbed "Columbia's best running back in years," suffered a knee injury

Other Casualties

This was the third Columbia casualty. Before the season opened the team lost Mike Lacopo, junior fullback who had been switched to tackle, due to a recurring head injury, and Roland Worthington, sophomore center converted from fullback, due to a knee injury in a scrimmage with Delaware.

So, minus men it couldn't spare, the Lion varsity has proceeded to do its best against superior opposition. It fought back gamely from a two-touchdown deficit to edge Brown, 14 to 12. It fought its way to a 7-0 lead against Princeton and held a 7-6 margin through the first 36 minutes of play after having a TD pass called back for an offside penalty.

It yielded two quick touchdowns to Yale but fought back again to trail 20-14 early in the third period. It missed two scoring opportunities at that point, one from Yale 28; the other from the 17, that would have put them ahead, before succumbing to Eli's depth of manpower.

Harvard, with the assistance of the East's fourth consecutive wet Saturday, and Army, with the usual fast, strong Cadet squad, dominated the next two games.

Visit High Schools—Promote College

Alumni in thirty states are telling the "Columbia College Story" to secondary school principals, teachers, students and parents. Their purpose: to attract to Columbia qualified students from across the nation.

Some 180 alumni are participating in this new program initiated last year by the Dean's Office. Eighty-five of the alumni are working within the framework of a local Alumni Club; the remainder are in areas where no organized Club exists at the present time.

Dean Coleman in Charge

The program is administered by Assistant to the Dean Henry (Harry) S. Coleman '46 who is in contact with representatives from Massachusetts to California, Texas to Wisconsin. To these men go a steady stream of material on admissions and scholarships to keep them up to date on the College.

Each alumnus assumes responsibility for one or at the most two schools in his community. He visits the school, establishes liaison with the principal and guidance counselor, and seeks out the best all-around students for the College.

In his original bid to alumni to join the field representative program, Dean Lawrence H. Chamberlain pointed out that "at present about 50 of each entering class come from places outside a seventy-five mile radius of New York. We would like to increase this number by another seventy-five and also improve the quality, excellent though it already is."

Visit Representatives

Members of the Dean's Office plan to visit the alumni representatives during the year to advise them further on the program's operation. Dean Coleman has already met in Boston with the Massachusetts area representatives who include J. Kenneth Bennett '35 of Weston, William F. Bissett '35 of Wellesley, James A. Britt '32 of Andover, Warren E. Conklin '52 of Waltham, Dr. George Cyroen '44 of Framingham, Stanley E. Green '44 of Saugus.

Also, Glenwood I. Hersey '38 of Beverly, Perry M. Hudson '48 of Needham Heights, Earle F. Plank '19 of Lexington, and John T. Thompson '39 of Westwood.

The College seeks at the present time to expand the program, according to Dean Coleman who added that the Secondary Schools Committee of the Alumni Association is working with his office in enlisting additional alumni. Interested alumni should write to Dean Coleman, 211 Hamilton Hall, Columbia College, New York 27, New York.

Ask Alumni to Aid Deans Day Program

Determined to make Deans Day 1956 the most successful in the ten-year history of the event, Chairman Randolph I. Thornton '28 is using this issue of COLUMBIA COLLEGE TODAY to poll all alumni on their preferences for discussion topics.

Deans Day will be held on Saturday, February 11.

"All alumni are invited to use the form provided below to indicate general topics they or their wives and guests would like to see included in the program. When these preferences are tabulated, we will endeavor to secure suitable experts from the faculty as discussion leaders," Mr. Thornton said.

Professor Peter Riccio '21 is vice chairman of the affair in charge of faculty participation.

Meanwhile, Thornton revealed that charges for February's affair will be sharply reduced over previous years. The formal luncheon, a fixture of recent Deans Days, will be abandoned in favor of informal groups gathering in eating places of their own choice.

Other members of the Deans Day 1956 Committee are John C. Fowler, '17, George B. Robinton '22, Beril Edelman '24, Hugh J. Kelly '26, Samuel R. Walker '29, William B. Sanford '30, Robert D. Lilley '34, J. Robert Cherneff '42, Robert H. Young '47 and Herbert J. Rohrbach, Jr. '50.

Name Barzun To Graduate Faculty Post

Jacques Barzun '27, professor of history at the University, has been appointed dean of the Graduate Faculties. The announcement was made on October 5 by President Grayson Kirk, following approval of the appointment by the University's Trustees.

Professor Barzun succeeds the late Edgar G. Miller who died last June.

Following graduation from the College, Professor Barzun continued his studies at the University, receiving his master of arts degree in 1928 and PhD in 1932. He was named an instructor in 1929, an associate professor in 1942 and a full professor three years later.

Widely Known

The new dean is widely noted as a scholar, teacher and author. His book "Teacher in America," published in 1945, is one of the most talked-of volumes on teaching. Other books include "Of Roman Freedom," "Darwin, Marx, Wagner," and "Romanticism and the Modern Ego."

Five years ago Professor Barzun wrote the two-volume work "Berlioz and the Romantic Century." Last year "God's Country and Mine"—an appraisal of life in America—was published.

An outstanding authority on the General Education movement, Professor Barzun has been one of the leaders in the Colloquium on Important Books.

Freshman Week

By DAVID HEYMSFELD '59

There were 683 of us who gathered together on Morningside Heights the hot and humid afternoon of Sunday, September 18. Some of us had traveled thousands of miles, others, ten minutes on the subway.

During the hectic week that followed, most of us found many new friends, while, as a group, we developed the roots of a class spirit that should continue to grow until our graduation in 1959.

Many an old grad would have been amazed at our Columbia welcome. Arriving at John Jay Hall we were met by upperclass hosts who not only showed us where to check in, but helped us with our bags, and in general did everything possible to get us settled in our rooms. Later we attended a Dean's Reception where we and our parents were greeted personally by the Deans, Alumni Association President Wayne Van Orman, and others.

A major purpose of Freshman Week was to give us an orientation to our new environment. Of extreme importance was our introduction to the great traditions we were fortunate enough to inherit. This phase was conducted by the Deans and other officers at several assemblies and meetings.

In rapid succession we were then amused by accounts of freshmen in 1909 chewing pearl buttons off beanies, awed by warnings of the 50-hour work week which lay ahead, and inspired by explanations of opportunities available for a liberal education.

Enjoyable programs were conducted in the evenings in an informal atmosphere accompanied by singing and cheering. We met the Chaplains, headed by Chaplain Krumm and, in addition, we were counseled on selective service procedure and opportunities in the R.O.T.C.

There was an evening for athletics at which we met the coaches, and saw fencing and wrestling demonstrations. At Kings Crown Activities Night we met representatives from Spectator, campus radio station WKCR and other campus organizations. We were each provided with an upper class adviser who gave us "inside dope" on everything from professors' eccentricities to Barnard girls.

On the last day before classes began, '59 participated in the College's first annual Community Help Day. This day exemplified Freshman Week's principal of substituting constructive activities for the traditional College "Hell Week" procedure.

Freshman Week's most important achievement—that of developing class unity and personal friendships—is largely an intangible and personal matter. It is possible, however, to say that by the time classes had begun on September 29, most of us had found a second home on Morningside Heights.

Chairman of Trustees Is Honored at Dinner

Addressing the Standing Committee of the Alumni Association on October 17, Maurice T. Moore, chairman of the University Trustees, affirmed his admiration for the College and its "great history, tradition and program of general education."

The occasion was a dinner meeting in the Men's Faculty Club marking, almost to a day, the 140th anniversary of the founding of the Alumni Association. The organization came into being on October 16, 1815.

Distinguished Guests

Guests of honor at the affair were Mr. Moore, Robert W. Watt '16, vice chairman of the Trustees, and President Grayson Kirk. Other speakers included Mr. Watt, Dr. Kirk, Proctor Walter R. Mohr '13, Joseph D. Coffee, Jr. '41, Director of Development for the College, and Deans Lawrence H. Chamberlain and Nicholas M. McKnight '21. Toastmaster of the evening was Standing Committee Chairman Aaron W. Berg '24, who was introduced by Wayne Van Orman '28, president of the Alumni Association.

Noting that Columbia does not have a "big campus or other features of country club college life," Mr. Moore declared that the College "more than compensates by being part of a great, international university with all its research and scholarship."

"It gains too," Mr. Moore added, "being located in the largest city in the world."

In another reference to "country club atmosphere," he said that it is "becoming less attractive, because people are more serious about education today."

Appraising Columbia's needs, the president of the University declared that alumni and administrators have a job equally as important as improving physical facilities on the campus—and that is to "provide the means to hold and attract great scholars."

"Physical facilities mean little," Dr. Kirk observed, "if the great scholars aren't there to put their stamp on the students. These scholars are the very heart and core of any institution."

The President said that he is "more optimistic about Columbia than ever before," and attributed his confidence in large part to the "splendid people whom we may call upon freely to give what they can to Columbia tradition." In this regard he cited both Mr. Moore and Mr. Watt.

Praises College

Calling Columbia the "outstanding liberal arts college in the country," Dr. Kirk said that both the College and the University have great traditions, that each "gives strength to the other," and that "we shall build together in our third century an institution the likes of which the world has never seen before."

Earlier in the evening Proctor Mohr had congratulated Mr. Moore on the latter's election as chairman of the Trustees. In expressing the commonly held objectives of the College, Mr. Mohr listed such "essentials" as adequate salaries for good teachers; provision of comprehensive building and recreational facilities; alumni efforts to bring to the College the very finest students, as well as to instill loyalty in the student body and make interested alumni out of the graduates.

Settled in new quarters, Bernard Ireland '31, Associate Director of Admissions, briefs his assistants James Larson '55, right, and Jack O'Hearne '55, center.

New Admission Office Makes Debut

"A dream come true" were the words Bernard P. Ireland '31, Associate Director of Admissions, used to describe the new College Admissions Office at its dedication on Monday, October 17.

Formerly in cramped quarters in University Hall, the office now has spacious and handsomely furnished accommodations in Room 105 of Low Memorial Library.

Lauds Council

Mr. Ireland told an audience of nearly fifty persons—including University President Grayson Kirk, the College deans, members of the Alumni Association's Standing Committee and other guests invited by the deans for the brief dedicatory ceremony—that "among the very first to recognize the need for larger and more attractive quarters for the Admissions Office were the members of the Columbia College Council."

He then expressed "deep appreciation" to the Alumni Association, whose members authorized its re-furnishing. The Association had voted $5,000 for this purpose at its annual meeting last May 16.

Calling attention to the striking decor of the office, Mr. Ireland cited the Decorating Committee composed of Joseph P. Nye, Director of University Residence Halls, Professor of Fine Arts Everard M. Upjohn, and Standing Committee members Aaron W. Berg '24 and John C. Thomas, Jr. '48.

Introduce Van Orman

Mr. Ireland introduced Association President Wayne Van Orman '28 who termed the alumni gift the "finest thing the Association could do for the College at this time." Mr. Van Orman underscored the importance of suitable admissions facilities, pointing out that the "first impression a student gets of the College is right here in the Admissions office."

On behalf of the Association, Mr. Van Orman then "presented the new furnishings" to President

Kirk who hailed the occasion as an auspicious one, and added that "we look forward to the opportunity of welcoming freshmen in these ideal surroundings."

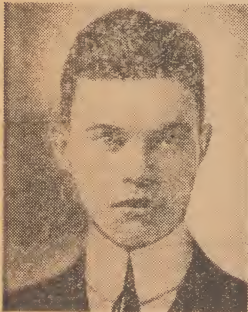

The guests were unanimous in their praise of the new office. Attractively upholstered couches and easy chairs, set in a group arrangement, complement the light blue walls, ivory ceiling and tile floor. Blue and grey cornices, with matching drapes, further enhance the room. Modern floor lamps and end-table lamps provide subdued lighting. Appropriate historical portraits soon will be displayed on the walls.

Association Plaque

Over the fireplace a bas relief of Kings Crown is to be placed; on the mantelpiece is a plaque inscribed: "This Room Furnished and Presented to Columbia College by the Association of the Alumni, Columbia College, October 17, 1955."

Know Them?

Here are four of our distinguished alumni as they appeared in "Columbian" the year they were graduated from the College. (See Answers on Page 6)

1918. Member of Psi Upsilon fraternity; Insignia, 1918; His nickname, the Columbian reminds us, was "Fritz".

1928. Spectator Contributing Board; Columbian; Varsity Show; Soph Show Publicity; Member of Phi Sigma Delta.

1948. Class President; President, Phi Gamma Delta; Received Alumni Prize; Secretary-Treasurer, Pamphratia.

Ladies Assist Thrift Shop in Clothing Drive

Active support of Everybody's Thrift Shop continues to be a primary function of the Women's Committee of the Alumni Association. The Thrift Shop, located at 922 Third Avenue in New York City, solicits such articles as old clothes and small items of furniture for resale purposes.

Has New Name

The Women's Committee, formerly known as the Ladies Auxiliary, adopted its present name this fall. Its chairman is Mrs. Thomas Witter Chrystie. Other officers are Mrs. Louis L. Pettit, recording secretary, and Mrs. Frank W. Chambers, corresponding secretary.

Declaring that bachelors, widows, and people painting or moving, constitute the "best customers" for the Thrift Shop, Mrs. Frederick V.P. Bryan, chairman of the Thrift Shop Subcommittee, has called for a concerted campaign to solicit these groups. A system of collection in suburban areas is being planned, with emphasis on those communities which have no thrift shops of their own.

Mrs. Bryan said that anyone interested in serving on the Subcommittee should call her in New York City at Sacramento 2-3198.

The other subcommittees and their chairmen are: Nominating, Mrs. Edward K. Everard; Glee Club, Mrs. John R. Haas; and Student Activities, Mrs. Theodore C. Garfield.

Add 12 Alumni to Standing Committee

The Standing Committee of the Alumni Association now has nation-wide representation. Twelve alumni, all of whom live more than 75 miles from New York City, were unanimously approved for membership at the first Standing Committee meeting of the 1955-56 academic year on September 19. The announcement of their election was made by Chairman Aaron W. Berg '24.

This brings the total membership of the Standing Committee to twenty-four.

Will Aid in Planning

Representing forty-five states, the new members are to participate in Committee planning, thereby "guaranteeing that decisions of the Standing Committee reflect the thinking of alumni throughout the country," declared Mr. Berg.

He also announced the appointment of Arthur Jansen '25 as chairman of the Regional Program Subcommittee, and George F. Jenkins '28 of Charleston, West Virginia, one of the twelve new members, as regional vice-chairman. Also on the Subcommittee is Robert E. Friou '38.

The new Subcommittee chairman called the election of the twelve representatives a "significant advance in the Association's program to strengthen alumni loyalty nationally."

The new members, and the states they represent are: Robert Berne '38 of Denver, Colorado (Wyoming, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma); William E. Collin '24 of Los Angeles, California (Southern California, Arizona, New Mexico, Utah); Edwin E. Dunaway '36 of Little Rock, Arkansas (Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri); Alan L. Gornick '35 of Dearborn, Michigan (Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Michigan).

Other Members

Also, Donald L. Harbaugh '22 of Cleveland, Ohio (Ohio); B. Franklin Hearn, Jr. '25 of Baltimore (Maryland); Philip B. Holmes '26 of Amherst, New Hampshire (Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Maine, Vermont); Mr. Jenkins (Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky); William N. Kanehann '46 of Allentown, Pennsylvania (Pennsylvania, Delaware).

Also, Walter R. Roath '38 of Dallas, Texas (Texas); Leon Shiman '24 of Indianapolis, Indiana (Indiana); Howard N. West '40 of San Francisco, California (Northern California, Nevada, Idaho, Oregon, Washington).

Classes Sponsor 117 Fund Scholarships

Alumni, parents and friends of Columbia are sponsoring the education of 117 undergraduates in the College this year through contributions to the 4th Annual Columbia College Fund.

In addition, Dean Lawrence H. Chamberlain has announced that a "substantial number" of gifts to the 4th Fund have been designated by the donors for projects other than scholarships, or for general purposes to meet the many needs of the College.

The Dean declared that support of scholarships continues to be a primary objective of the College Fund. He noted that each year some 250,000 talented high school graduates are unable to enter college because of the high cost.

Underscoring the economic factor, Dean Chamberlain pointed out that it costs an average of $1,900 annually to attend Columbia, tuition and fees being $790.

"By comparison," the Dean said, "tuition and fees only fifteen years ago were $400. In 1910 they were $210."

The Dean called the mushrooming scholarship aid programs of business and industry "further evidence of increasing national concern for the problem of assuring the means for gifted young people to go to college."

Alumni Derive Satisfaction
Referring to alumni support of the College Fund, Dean Chamberlain observed that each class "to the extent of its participation, and the dollar value of the scholarships awarded, has the satisfaction of sponsoring the education of a number of deserving young men."

The Class of 1925 leads all other classes in the number of students sponsored with eight. Next are the Classes of 1919 and 1921 with seven each, followed by 1923 with six students.

Comprising the current crop of 117 Alumni Class Scholars are 21 seniors, 27 juniors, 38 sophomores and 31 freshmen. Twenty of the group are from the five boroughs of New York City. Another fifteen are New York State residents living beyond the metropolitan area. Among the other eastern states represented are New Jersey with ten, Pennsylvania with seven, Connecticut with four and Massachusetts with nine. Such distant states as California, Utah and Texas have sent three, two and five students respectively.

There is one foreign student, Alexios E. Kokkinopoulos '58, sponsored by the Class of 1916.

The remaining students come from Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Nebraska, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming.

Other Scholarship Programs

Currently there are 543 scholarship students in the College, according to Dean of Students Nicholas M. McKnight, who said that this total represents 23 per cent of the student body. They include, in addition to the 117 Alumni Class Scholars, 66 Ford Foundation scholars, 34 scholars sponsored by the Joint Industry Board of the Electrical Industry of New York, and two sponsored by Local 32B of the Building Service Employees International Union.

Also, 30 class endowed scholars, 145 other endowed scholars, 93 scholars supported by Columbia University funds, and 29 sponsored by corporations or other organizations.

Pointing out that the Ford Foundation, labor and industry sponsored scholarships are not "necessarily" permanent in nature, Dean McKnight said that the College seeks to build a program which assures a permanent level of "at least 25 per cent of the student body benefiting from scholarship aid."

Memorial Scholarship Established

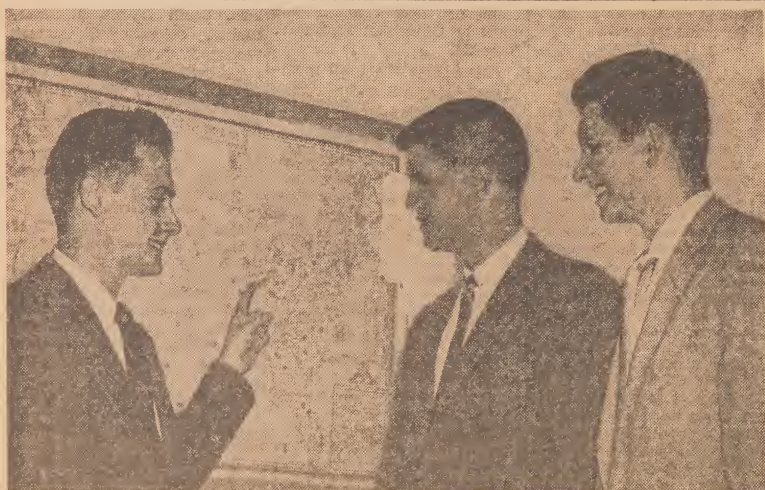

A "living memorial" to the late Michael Addison, Class of 1912, has been created at Columbia.

Dean Lawrence H. Chamberlain announced this month the establishment of the Michael Addison Scholarship in honor of the former industrialist and member of the New York Stock Exchange who died on June 10 of this year at the age of 63.

The Scholarship was made possible by the Estate of Mr. Addison and his widow, Mrs. Viola G. Addison. They have established a fund for this purpose in excess of $5,000. Valued at $833 annually, it is to be awarded each year to a "needy student," the Dean made known.

In accepting the gift, Dean Chamberlain wrote to Mrs. Addison, saying in part: "... we can think of no more respectful way to provide memorial honor than identifying a loved one's name with opportunity for the outstanding youth of the country."

"In a very real sense you have provided a living memorial for your husband. Secondly, for the prospective student you have offered a priceless challenge by removing the financial obstacle to achieving his dream of a college education."

Theodore D. Foxworthy '59 points out his home town, Indianapolis, Indiana, to Assistant to the Dean Henry (Harry) S. Colman '46, center, and William B. Henry '59 of Yonkers, New York. Young Foxworthy is an Alumni Class Sponsored Scholar (Class of 1937); Henry is a recipient of a Charles Hayden Memorial Scholarship.

Roar Lion Roar

Francis I. Du Pont & Company, New York investment firm, has a new general partner: Harold A. Rousselot '29 who retired as of September 1st as general and managing partner of Orvis Brothers. Mr. Rousselot is chairman of the University Committee on Athletics, a former president of the Varsity C Club, former vice-president of the Alumni Association, and past member of the Columbia College Council. He is the newly elected vice president of the Society of Class Presidents.

The Book-of-the-Month Club selection for September was "Marjorie Morningstar" (published by Doubleday), the best-seller creation of Herman Wouk '34, author of "The Caine Mutiny". Mr. Wouk was the subject of a lively cover article in Time magazine recently, in which it was revealed that he counts the late beloved Irwin Edman as one of the two great influences of his life.

Howard S. Meighan '28 has been named vice-president of CBS Television in charge of its western division. Long a vice-president of CBS, Mr. Meighan was CBS-Radio's first president following that company's reorganization in 1949. He is president of his class and a recipient of the Alumni Medal.

Since 1949 the Columbia Alumni News has had the benefit of the talented and perceptive pen of Gene R. Hawes '49 who served first as associate editor to Stephen "Don" Karl '41, and for the past four years as editor. Last month Gene departed for an editorial post with the College Entrance Examination Board. Gene's immediate superior at the Board: his old boss, Don Karl. . . . Taking over the helm of the Alumni News is its associate editor, Erik Wensberg '54.

From the University of Florida Press comes an announcement of the publication of two books about Japan, with an interesting note that the respective authors are both Columbia men. One is Professor George A. Lenson '45 of the Florida faculty, who has told the little known story of Russia's Japan Expedition of 1852 to 1855. The title, appropriately: "Russia's Japan Expedition". . . . The other is Professor John A. Harrison '41, also of the Florida faculty, the author of "Japan's Northern Frontier", a study of the influence of this frontier on Japanese history.

The Grand Jury Association of New York County has commended Frank S. Hogan '24 for his "excellent record as District Attorney of New York County". In a different capacity—that of general chairman of the 4th Annual Columbia College Fund—Mr. Hogan was lauded at the end of the current campaign by University President Grayson Kirk who wrote to the District Attorney expressing gratitude for his outstanding service to Columbia.

Speaking of District Attorney Hogan, he has created in his organization the new post of administrative assistant, and assigned to it Assistant District Attorney Richard H. Kuh '41.

Buttenwieser '19, partner in Kuhn Loeb and Company, investment bankers, and former Assistant High Commissioner for Germany. Mr. Buttenwieser was general chairman of the 3rd Annual Columbia College Fund, and is a member of the Columbia College Council.

Because of the long and varied background of Dr. Samuel Guy Inman '04 in Pan American affairs, the Congressional Library requested, and now has on deposit, Dr. Inman's complete papers spanning a half century of the Pan American movement. The material consists of travel letters, newspaper interviews, stories of international meetings, broadcasts, lectures, manuscripts.

Joseph N. Friedman '40, former Assistant United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, has entered private practice in New York City, specializing in appellate matters.

Five-hundred acres of citrus trees in Southern California are rapidly being transformed into a model community of homes with fine roads. The site is the Leffingwell Rancho of East Whittier; the owner, Charles W. Leffingwell '92. The crowning achievement to date, reports Mr. Leffingwell, is the recent dedication of the Leffingwell Elementary School consisting of six large classroom buildings on the Ranch with an extensive area for recreational purposes.

A College, and School of Engineering, man has designed the "safest suspension bridge in the world." The designer is Dr. David B. Steinman '09 C&E, and the bridge, the Mackinac Bridge, a new $100-million structure, soon to link Michigan's upper and lower peninsulas.

Authorities predict that Dr. Steinman's design heralds a "new era in the science of bridge design."

The title of "Most Beloved Citizen of Oak Park, Illinois" has been bestowed upon Clarence E. Winchell '08. Active on the official board of his church for many years, Mr. Winchell also serves as secretary of a Y.M.C.A. of 4,000 members in a new $2-million building.

Lists Objectives

In a keynote address, Mr. Garfield reviewed the history of the Society, and outlined these major objectives:

1. To provide a closer liaison between the alumni classes and the Alumni Association, the College Development office, the Deans' office and the College itself.

2. To create a meeting ground for the exchange of ideas between the classes, for the help and encouragement of less well organized classes by those with strongly developed leadership and programs; to assist each new class as it is graduated into the alumni body to the end that it does not lose the impetus of senior year unity and enthusiasm.

3. To direct the compilation of a directory of all alumni by classes.

In an address marked by a liveliness and wit which delighted his audience, Mr. Robinson—author of the best-selling novels "The Great Snow" and "The Cardinal"—described himself as an "erstwhile and quondam president."

On a more serious note, Mr. Robinson called for further reactivation of classes, and the inculcating of new standards of responsibility among alumni. He concluded by stating that the Society of Class Presidents must help Columbia "maintain its place and gain ground in the intercollegiate race."

As the final speaker of the evening, President Kirk paid tribute to those who contributed funds for the new wing of the Field House. The principal contributors, he said, were the Classes of 1920, 1928 and 1929, the late Ferris Booth of the Class of 1924, and

Mrs. David W. Smyth whose late husband was Class of 1902.

The President described the enormous problems that confront private colleges, citing in particular the demand for expanding facilities for the 5,000,000 college students expected yearly in the next decade.

A brief business meeting followed the President's address. Calling the installation of officers an "historic occasion," Mr. Van Orman lauded the accomplishment of "Ted" Garfield in bringing the Society of Class Presidents into being. He declared that the Association is "proud of the part it has played in backing the new organization."

In a brief ceremony Mr. Van Orman turned over a gavel to the Society's first president. In turn, Mr. Curtiss presented a gavel to Calvin Lee '55, class president, observing that one responsibility of the Society is to see that the youngest alumni class is well organized.

65 per cent contributing. The Fund chairman for '54 was Howard Falberg.

The most dramatic improvement of any class in both dollars and contributors was shown by 1948, whose chairman was Sheldon Levy. Almost doubling its participation—251 gifts were received, compared to 144 last year—the Class placed third in this category.

In fourth place is 1924 with a total of 185 gifts—the only "older" class in the top five in participation. Its chairman was Harold T. Muller. Ranking fifth with 182 gifts is 1953, whose chairman was Lewis Robins.

Leads in Dollars

The Class of 1924 has the additional distinction of leading all other classes in the amount of money raised with $53,992.40. The "runner-up" classes in aggregate funds raised, and their chairmen, are: 1903 with $39,932.87 (Harold C. McCollom); 1919 with $22,899.50 (Stanley R. Jacobs); 1916 with $16,552.00 (Nicholas Buccell); 1920 with $13,963.89 (Waldemar J. Neumann).

Of the total funds raised through the efforts of class committees, Chairman Hogan reported that $295,714.44 was contributed by 5,617 alumni.

The Parents Committee raised a total of $6,026.00 from parents of students now in the College. Chairman of the committee was Dr. Oscar J. Chase, father of "Columbia sons" George and Jerry, both '50, and Peter '55. Gifts from friends totaled $43,250.73.

Where The Money Goes

Substantial funds are being used to support 116 alumni class sponsored scholarship students. Other funds were earmarked by contributors for 56 different projects in the College. In addition, many alumni have requested that their gifts be used by the Dean for purposes not provided for in the annual budget.

Assisting General Chairman Hogan this year was Executive Committee Chairman, Arthur V. Smith '31 and Class Organization Chairman Shepard L. Alexander '21. (See Page 8 for a complete roster of 4th Fund committees).

Rebirth of a Community

This article by Gertrude Samuels a staff writer for The New York Times Magazine is reprinted in its entirety from the September 25, 1955 issue of the Magazine.

(Many alumni are not aware of the dynamic social changes taking place on Morningside Heights. For this reason, COLUMBIA COLLEGE TODAY is pleased to reprint a recent article from The New York Times Magazine which tells the full and inspiring story of a vast community improvement and redevelopment program. It is a program which reflects the dedicated efforts of fourteen major institutions on the Heights, including Columbia—as well as numerous other agencies and individuals—in collaboration with the City's Committee on Slum Clearance.)

By GERTRUDE SAMUELS

"Where there is no vision, the people perish."—Proverbs, XXIX, 18.

In New York and other major cities of the country, city planners and social scientists, faced with tough overpopulation and delinquency problems, are deeply worried about communities that are running down. Good neighborhoods become overcrowded; buildings show their age and maintenance slips; new groups pour in, competing for space, education, understanding; old groups, decent and devoted to the community, develop fears and flee to "safer" neighborhoods.

Perhaps more important than the physical blight itself is this blight's impact on human values. Social scientists note that in every community, the life or death of the area is traceable to the vision—or lack of vision—of its leaders. The real building blocks, they observe, are people; and whether a community lives and grows depends on whether people are being divided by worsening conditions, or held together by the cement of human relations.

A Unique Community

These were some of the grim issues facing one New York community—Morningside Heights—shortly after World War II. Situated in Manhattan and defined as the area from 108th to 125th Streets and from Manhattan and Morningside Avenues to the Hudson River, some 365 acres and 60,000 people, it was a uniquely cosmopolitan community with a split personality.

On an eminence of Manhattan, one side of the Heights rises sheer off the Hudson like a monument—a powerhouse of educational, medical and religious institutions that represent over forty nationalities. Here, where Washington had fought the British in the Battle of Harlem Heights, in magnificent buildings of Renaissance and Gothic influence, come men and women from the ends of the earth: to study in the halls and libraries of Columbia University and Barnard College; to live together in good will at International House; to train as ministers and rabbis at Union Theological Seminary and Jewish Theological Seminary to study at Julliard School of Music; to move in the solitude of the great Cathedral of St. John the Divine; and to work in the other institutions that grace the area, which is dominated by the gothic colossus of Riverside Church. Set among curving lines of trees, and also bolted against interlopers, the "elite" side of Morningside Heights was then for the most part closed off like many another college community—"gown" against "town."

Physically, it could never escape its fate. It was in a decaying area. To the east where the Heights dipped sharply at Morningside Park, to the north where it descended to Manhattanville or "the Valley," the other side of the Heights was a spreading slum. The park was virtually off-bounds to students and faculty as "too dangerous." Poverty and delinquency were aggravated by the post-war influx of Puerto Rican newcomers crowding into an already overcrowded area.

In worry and alarm, the institutions, which previously had little touch with one another, much less with the rest of the community, turned for advice to an outside expert, Wilbur C. Munneke, then vice president of the University of Chicago. Munneke bluntly criticized their academic outlook as being not only against their own interests but lacking in democratic vision. He said that only "positive action" could remake the neighborhood. He urged Columbia, which held much of the land on the Heights, to think about pulling up the whole community.

New Agency Formed

Led by David Rockefeller, whose father created International House, the institutions created a non-profit corporation, called Morningside Heights, Inc., with a budget of $40,000 a year to "promote the improvement and redevelopment of Morningside Heights as an attractive residential, educational and cultural community." They chose as executive director Lawrence M. Orton, a member of New York's City Planning Commission since 1938, who could be depended on to think of human as well as building values.

In 1950, the writer visited the area and wrote of the plans and dreams of those attempting to reshape the community. Morningside Heights, Inc., then was mainly a fact-gathering agency. Its many studies showed that the large majority of people wanted to stay in the area; that much of "the Valley" was beyond redemption and would have to come down; that there was a shortage of schools. Basically, the people wanted to be happy where they were living; to have good schools for their children; to be safe on the streets.

Now five years later, you go back to see what came of the dreams. Has the blight been halted? How do the people feel about the future? Other communities, including one close to Morningside Heights, have been experimenting with housing projects and delinquency control, yet appear to be making no headway against deterioration. What was different about Morningside Heights' story?

Let Lawrence Orton tell it: "Bricks and mortar in new housing projects aren't enough to make over a community. To be sure, other neighborhoods are tearing down slums, and there's a great cry in many places about juvenile delinquency, and public education is a matter of universal concern. But in many neighborhoods the benefits are lost or minimized because each of the problems is tackled separately, and there is no unified community effort with everyone pulling together."

"I often think that so many who are fighting juvenile delinquency, for example, are fighting forlorn battles. They're not bolstered by good housing, good schools, good recreation and broad leadership which give solid continuing support to the rounded program of all groups. This is what is happening up here. The efforts of all the different organizations and some new ones are geared to pyramid the benefits. You don't have this in many communities. You do have it today in ours."

A Complete Recasting

What has been taking place is a complete recasting of the community. The changes in the physical plant have been stepped up by legislation; the human gains were wrought by the people themselves. The way has been hard and tortuous at times; there have been resistance and misunderstanding and hostility. "Misunderstanding," the planners wryly observe, "can't be done overnight." But the achievements of the past five years—and the failures—make a dramatic balance sheet.

On the plus side some $80 million has been spent on or committed to both private and public housing in the Morningside-Manhattanville area—for a total of 4-

209 family units, or some 15,000 individuals. A two-part plan was developed: The institutions created a real estate organization, the Morningside Heights Housing Corporation, and signed an agreement with New York City to build and finance a $12,500,000 middle-income cooperative project; the Board of Estimate also approved plans for a $27,000,000 low-income public housing project adjoining the cooperative.

Today, the old "La Salle Street slums" are completely demolished—some forty acres of antiquated rat traps wiped off the map. In their stead are rising the Morningside Gardens cooperative at an average down-payment of $3,200 and an average carrying charge of $21 per room per month; nearby, the General Grant Houses public project, to rent for an average $9 per room per month. And, heartened by Morningside, Inc., and following surveys by that group, the City Housing Authority has condemned tenements to the north of the area, where Manhattanville Houses are to be built, starting next spring.

On Adjoining Sites

What is inspiring to many are the psychological and social insights that went into the redevelopment plans. For both Morningside Gardens and Grant Houses are to be twenty-one-story, skyscraper-type buildings—similar except for some balconies on the cooperative; both will be nonsegregated and "mixed up" housing in the best sense. With no barriers between the buildings—when landscaped, they will flow naturally into one another—the fairly comfortable and the poor, intellectuals, white-collar workers, truck drivers, porters, will be living side by side. The people who formerly lived on the site have priority on the new housing and buildings are rising rapidly. Occupation to start in 1956.

On the "plus" side is also the burgeoning of the institutions. Once, while President Eisenhower was president of Columbia, he looked out of his Low Library study to 116th Street which bisected the university, a dirty, hazardous street cluttered with cars, and commented wistfully, "Wouldn't it be great if this were one green stretch?" Today it is—the street is closed to traffic, with a lovely, flowing campus the result. And Columbia has plans for a new law building; an engineering center; a graduate resident hall, and an Institute of Arts and Sciences with lectures and concerts for the public.

Others likewise evidenced their faith in the community's future. St. Luke's Hospital built a new marble wing; Barnard unified and beautified its campus; Riverside Church plans a new parish house, and a block-long, seventeen-story headquarters of the National Council of the Churches of Christ is to rise at 119th Street and Riverside Drive on the Heights, as a center for Protestant denominations.

The Human Element

On the "plus" side is the way Morningside Heights, Inc., became a kind of conscience for the whole community. On many fronts—housing, public safety, recreation and cooperative community planning—it developed teams of intellectuals, labor, civic and religious leaders to involve the institutions with one another and with the people of the community. For a long time the situation had been all down-hill—juvenile crime, traced to Manhattanville, was increasing; so was the exodus to the suburbs. A Morningside Citizens Committee was created; hard-working individuals like Father George Barry Ford of Corpus Christi Church and Clyde Murray, director of the Manhattanville Community Centers, and Puerto Rican leaders quietly persevered to interpret the changes to the people and fight the battle against public apathy. This is their harvest.

(1) The people were helped: Relocation of some 5,000 families on the site was a delicate human problem. The shock of moving anywhere was hard for many poor families to accept. An extreme left-wing group called "Save Our Homes" had sprung up, charging that the intention of community leaders was to get Negroes and Puerto Ricans out of the neighborhood. "Save Our Homes" led demonstrations at City Hall. Its propaganda bitterly divided the community, many of whom could understand neither the language nor the issues. At first the Morningside Citizens failed dismally to reach the Spanish community—until Puerto Rican leaders created a West Side Spanish Committee which interpreted the aims of the community to the newcomers "at their own level, to give them a feeling of belonging."

Civic Groups Cooperate

Rumors were scotched when more than thirty civic groups, including trade unions, veterans associations and social agencies, gave their approval to the Morningside Gardens cooperative. A humane approach to relocation and new tenancy was assured by the hiring of a staff of former New York Housing Authority experts which kept careful records of every family; paid bonuses and expenses to families having to move; planned demolition gradually so as not to move people about blindly.

(2) Newcomers will be helped. Some 15,000 residents will be pouring into the new homes—some new, some former site tenants—and their integration is not being left to chance. The planners want to build a good community spirit among them. Recently, at a branch library, representatives of twenty-five religious, school and civic groups met to discuss "welcome" techniques and plan visits by volunteers. "We can make the residents aware," says Father Ford, his face alight with hope, "that not only is this a great time to be allied with this community but that it will be even better."

(3) Property owners are co-operating. The most tragic pockets of blight in the area are the privately owned buildings and the so-called residential hotels of transient occupancy and questionable pursuits. The lack of decent occupancy standards is the curse of the entire city; lacking such standards and helped along by the greed of some landlords, many buildings have steadily deteriorated in the area. Recently, some forty local landlords were brought together by Morningside Heights, Inc. They formed a Property Owners Association to encourage good housing standards and to explore the possibilities of financing building improvements.

(4) Youth is being helped. Paid experts from Teachers College have been working with teachers of Public School 125 to enrich their programs with play therapy and art and music guidance. From a sense of panic, there is also developing a broad sense of security in the community today; the crime incidence has dropped 40 per cent since last January when police patrols were added to the area.

Institutions 'Pitch In'

Of vital importance is the evolution of the institutions as a social force. The Cathedral, whose guards had always warned youngsters off its grounds, has now thrown its gates open to play groups; it also boasts one of the city's most popular summer camp programs, supervised by the Y.M.C.A., with children recruited by the Citizens Committee. Columbia has opened its Baker Field up to the community's youngsters on week-ends. Today, several teams of former street gangs play baseball there under the supervision of volunteers because a young sociologist—Lewis Yablonsky, director of public safety of Morningside Heights, Inc.—had faith in their potential for good. Yablonsky's work "is still up hill," but here is how "Rauchy," a former street gang leader, summed it up the other Sunday at Baker Field:

"If Lew and Larry Sherwood (another worker) hadn't come along and got the league started last year, there would have been more trouble. All these kids who play baseball here were in a gang, the Aces. They're not in it now. They know that gangs are for cowards. They've got better things to do now."

In the near future, Columbia plans a new "citizenship center" in which students will get practical experience in civic problems by helping with the community's youngsters.

"I don't think that a university such as ours ought to exist as an enclave of a city," Dr. Grayson L. Kirk, president of Columbia, says. "It ought to be part of a city and part of the community. And its cultural resources ought, in so far as possible, to be made available to the people of the community."

A Long Way To Go

The "minus" side of the balance sheet shows that the battle for a healthy community is far from won.

Father Time—obsolescence—is in fine scarping. In the past five years, whole tiers of blocks south of the institutions have slipped in the natural process of aging but even more through overcrowding. There is the recognition that unless many of these buildings are depopulated, the improvements will never overtake the spreading blight.

As for schools, the two elementary schools and one junior high are inadequate; this deficiency is largely responsible for the departure of families. An outside expert has been hired to counsel the community on its school needs.

There has been inadequate planning for the "in-betweens"—those families not eligible for public housing, yet not comfortable enough to buy a cooperative. Many in this group will be off the site permanently—the lower middle-income group which can afford but $12 or $15 a room rent. Some consider this a definite loss to the community, though it is also observed that the planners had to work within the framework of existing legislation.

There is still a large area to explore in community relations. While many of the suspicions between the Heights and the Valley have been broken down, there are fears that the low-cost housing "will be slums in five years." As Anne Ruddy, principal of P. S. 125, puts it: "The people on the hill still have a long way to go to be sold on their responsibilities to the community and to the schools."

The Challenge

There is clearly much to be done in the years ahead. But the balance sheet for the past five years contains lessons for other communities facing similar problems:

To make any community over requires teamwork—the mobilizing of all the social, business, cultural forces.

Just as important is the mobilization of the people—for people can become a negative force, as they were for a time in Morningside Heights, unless they are made part of the program. Nor can people do the job alone: they must work with government, with school authorities, with law-enforcement agencies to effect neighborhood betterment.

Above all, a community needs trained leaders to be the "social engineers," to bring about the co-operation of private and public agencies that can revitalize a community. These are the people who realize that you can wipe out all the slums "and still not have a community" unless all are educated to live together on a friendly basis.

Father Ford Comments

Father Ford gave point to this concept not long ago in another New York community. Well-to-do, civic-minded representatives were attending meetings on upper Park Avenue and their talk was bitter about deterioration and what the city authorities should be doing for them. Father Ford sat on the sidelines listening. Finally he was asked for his opinion.

"I've heard all the criticisms here against the city," he said, "because of its apparent or real neglect. I think it's generous of you to come together to discuss your community's needs. But did you ever stop to think that you might adopt the responsibility for your own neighborhood?" In the shocked silence that followed, he went on, "Because the criticism is really against yourselves rather than against the city. What you're not seeing is your own opportunity."

Morningside Heights saw its opportunity. In fact, it was—and continues to be—this vision which is bringing about its rebirth.

The Class of '59 Termed 'Most Interesting' Group

The Columbia College Class of 1959—in the words of Associate Director of Admissions Bernard P. Ireland—is "one of the best qualified and most interesting groups to enter the College in recent years."

Mr. Ireland made the statement following a comprehensive study of a large sampling of the 650 class members on the basis of academic promise, geographical distribution and professional plans. The candidates were "selected from the ranks of approximately 2,700 applicants, at least half of whom were outstanding."

Forty-eight per cent of the class are from the five New York boroughs, 22 per cent from an area within a 50-mile radius of New York City, and the remainder from 38 states, Alaska and 10 foreign countries, reported Mr. Ireland. He added that several states rarely represented in quantity have this year sent a substantial number—California, for example, with 13 students. Other states represented: Arkansas, 4 students; Colorado, 3; Florida, 6; North Dakota, 2; Ohio, 16; Pennsylvania, 24; Massachusetts, 23.

Approximately 200 of the freshmen, according to Mr. Ireland, will be "straight" liberal arts students compared to 172 last year. In fact, he said, nearly 85 per cent of the group will be either liberal arts or preparing for professional study which requires not less than three years in the liberal arts and sciences.

Engineering and medicine continue to lead in professional choices with 152 and 150 candidates respectively, Mr. Ireland revealed. Ninety students plan to study law, with business attracting 34, journalism, 26, and dentistry, 22 students. Fourteen students plan to teach, and eight will study architecture.

sent to his classmate Arthur V. Smith, president of 1931, the Homecoming Day Flag for the largest attendance by any class. One hundred and forty members had reservations, although the rain kept many of them from being present.

To the Class of 1956 went a trophy cup for the largest undergraduate attendance. Victor Levin accepted the cup from Mr. Everard for Class President James Cuff.

On behalf of the newest alumni class, Donn T. Coffee '55, presented a 1955 class flag to Chairman Everard for Baker Field, where it is to be flown with those of other alumni classes.

Other Events

Private receptions and informal dinners by classes and fraternities took place following the game. The evening was climaxed by the Homecoming Ball in John Jay Hall, sponsored by the Blue Key Society.

A performance by the Columbia Players on Wednesday evening, October 12, in McMillin Theatre of "Anouilh's 'Antigone' and Shaw's 'Shewing Up of Blanco Posnet'" marked the opening of the Campus Homecoming program.

On Friday evening a joint concert of the Harvard and Columbia Glee Clubs was presented in John Jay Hall. The Reunion activities ended on a more serious note on Sunday, October 16, with non-denominational services in St. Paul's Chapel on the campus.

Serving with Chairman Everard on the Alumni Homecoming Reunion Committee were Gavin K. MacBain '32, vice-chairman; Federation President Cooper; Morris Watkins '24, executive secretary of the Federation; Frederick S. Berman '49, attendance; George C. Linn '29, 33 P&S and Arthur A. Kulick '26, reception and hospitality; William B. Sanford '30, Charles A. Fremd '28, and Herbert C. Rosenthal '38, Special Services.

Undergraduate representatives were Gary Angleberger '57, president of the Blue Key Society, Edward Heiser '57, undergraduate coordinator and Donald K. Larson '57, president of the Van Am Society.

Also participating were various Alumni Association and class representatives, University department heads and staff members.

Response has been enthusiastic to the "Columbian 30th Anniversary Edition" published by the Class of 1923.

Praise has come from such world figures as President Eisenhower, who said he was "delighted to have a copy", and the Queen Mother of England whose private Secretary wrote to Editor Aaron Fishman saying that "Her Majesty has so many happy memories of her visit to Columbia that she greatly appreciated your thought in sending this to her."

Kudos too came from Governor Harriman, Controller General Joseph Campbell, and from representatives of the American Alumni Council, the New York Public Library, and various other groups.

Alumni classes interested in launching a similar project may still obtain copies of the complete production and promotion plan of the Anniversary Edition by writing to Editor, Columbia College Today, Box 575, 4 West 43rd Street, New York 36, New York.

For a copy of the yearbook, send a check or money order for $5.30 to the Class of '23 Treasurer, Edward G. McLaughlin, 17 East 49th Street, New York 17, New York.

Forty-eight Alumni with wives attended the "spectacularly successful" Reunion, June 10 to 12, at Arden House.

Reporting on the affair, Class Secretary Joseph Lang writes in part:

"That evening (Friday, June 10) after we had had our cocktails outdoors, on the terrace, the usual luscious dinner followed in the candle-lit dining room. Then the early-comers trooped down to the alleys for the traditional bowling tournament . . . The rest of the evening, for those who wished, was spent in card-playing with television and just plain old-fashioned gab a close second.

"Saturday came and with it, the rain . . . Fortunately, the heavy dew did not dampen the spirits of those who had come to Arden . . . At dinner, the prizes for the bowling and golf were given out, and beautiful favors were presented to all the ladies, as well as door prizes to lucky number holders. The dance turned out to be spectacularly successful . . . After 1:00 A.M., there was the usual card-playing and conversation far into the night.

"Sunday morning was fine and bright . . . All gathered for a late breakfast, and enthusiastically determined to make it next year . . . Vic and Maida Roudin as usual warmly suggested that all still present come over to their place about a mile from the entrance to Arden, to partake of liquid refreshment and snacks before the trip home."

The following were present at the Reunion:

One reason for the large turnout was the fact that class member Edward K. Everard was general chairman of the Homecoming Reunion. Another was the special Class Cocktail Party for members and their families which was held at the Gould Boat House immediately after the Columbia-Harvard game. A third undoubtedly is the fact that '31 is starting its 25th Anniversary year.

Ed Everard also served as the chairman of the Class Party Committee, assisted by Art Smith, Irv DuFine and Barney Hanneken; who in turn were helped by Joris Everard, Dea Smith and Doris DuFine.

To celebrate its 25th Anniversary Year, '31 is planning a special Class Reunion event for some weekend late next Spring.

Early '50's Club

A new organization, the "Early '50's Luncheon Club", was founded on August 31, 1955. It has no dues, no officers, no constitution, no office, no money. It is a strictly informal organization, to which every member of Columbia College '50, '51, '52, '53, '54 and '55 can belong automatically by attending the luncheons.

These luncheons take place the first Thursday of every month, between 12:00 and 2:00 P.M., in the Men's Grill of the Columbia University Club, 4 West 43rd Street. It is not necessary to be a member of the Club to attend the luncheons.

The founding members are Frank Walwer '52, Lewis Robins '53, Bernd Brecher '54 and Donn Coffee '55. They hope the Luncheon Club will carry itself from now on, and that their classmates will stop by to "meet in good fellowship and high spirits".

(a) the amount of unrestricted funds contributed by the class; and
(b) the monetary value of each scholarship award (scholarship stipends vary).

² In addition to the scholarships made possible through gifts to the Columbia College Fund, these classes support scholarships or scholarship rooms in the dormitories through endowment provided in earlier years as anniversary gifts. Endowed awards are also supported by classes of 1848, 1884, 1892 and 1896.

⁴ These totals include gifts from friends and organizations resulting from activities of class committees.
